A river runs through it

NEW CIVILIZATIONS (above) seemingly popped up overnight on the beach at Stewart's Cove following the most recent storms to pelt the Central Coast. The storms washed piles of driftwood ashore, prompting some creative soul to spend time erecting a series of primitive huts. The rains prompted the Carmel River (below) to take a northerly turn as part of the same beach disappeared. Over the weekend, signs were erected that warned passers-by of the impending danger. Hatton Canyon Freeway

■ Another postponement follows emotion-packed public hearing

BY PAUL WOLF

THEY WERE hoping for no more delays on a decision, but at least one more postponement was inevitable.

Following a showdown in Salinas Wednesday, Feb. 24, between the forces supporting and opposing the Hatton Canyon freeway, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County (TAMC) agreed to continue a public hearing until its March meeting.

The TAMC hearing was dominated somewhat by opponents of the project, but there was passionate testimony from both sides. It was standing-room only at the Salinas Community Center.

The TAMC is expected at its March 24 meeting to decide whether it supports the construction of the freeway or whether it seeks to pursue alternatives —particularly the widening of Highway 1 and the creation of an interchange at the Carmel Valley Road intersection.

Earmarked funds

TAMC members expressed concerns that the $42 million earmarked for the freeway project would be sacrificed if the region were to choose another option. Opponents of the freeway cited a January resolution passed by the California Transportation Commission stating the funding is indeed transferable.

But members of the local agency, including Barbara Shipnuck, who is also a Monterey County Supervisor, argued the January resolution is ambiguous.

With the hearing continued, the March meeting should become what the February meeting was supposed to be — the decisive moment for the controversial project.

While most of the familiar arguments were delivered from either side of the debate, this particular public hearing was notable for the large number of Carmel High School students who attended.

Fervent opposition

They took turns approaching the microphone and expressing fervent opposition.

"This is our world," declared Nelli Keel, a junior. "Do you want the Central Coast to look like L.A.?"

"We are the future of Carmel, and we

■ CHS students enter fray with impassioned letters on project

We have to stop expanding at some point. We have to learn to make use of what we have.

— Jamie Meyerloff, ninth-grader, Carmel High School

By PAUL WOLF

THROUGH A great stack of letters, Carmel students have been speaking of the prospect of a Hatton Canyon freeway in plain, unadorned language.

Their tone is impassioned. Their plea is for the powers-that-be simply to drop the project.

"It's not right to sacrifice yet another wild ecosystem because we aren't resourceful or responsible enough," Meyerloff wrote. "Carmel Valley itself is too industrialized. Don't let that be Hatton Canyon's fate also."

Keeper of the letters

It was a grown-up, Carmel's Linda Smith, a fervent freeway opponent, who compiled all the student letters that were delivered to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors in advance of the Tuesday, Feb. 23, meeting.

She passed on two large stacks of photocopies to The Carmel Pine Cone. From Carmel Middle School, 46 wrote against the project, two in favor; from Carmel High School, 53 against, six in favor.

In these pages, the theme is clear — that humans share the earth with other species. "Sure, it (the freeway) may be a convenience for drivers, I understand that, but what about everything else," according to middle school's Susan Webb, who wrote three hand-written pages.

"What about all the animals, the beautiful trees, the plants, and the air. I think it is so selfish that the people would only think about themselves."

The degree to which the students may understand all the facets of the debate — the disputed claims, the traffic statistics, the wetlands mitigations — may be up for debate. But what can hardly be doubted is the intensity of feeling these letters show.

"I've not heard many adults talking as eloquently about the value of the freeway as they do," Smith said.

Middle school science teacher Craig Hohenberger explained his students were not assigned to write Barbara Shipnuck, chairwoman of the board of supervisors. But after hearing a guest speaker — Brian Roseth, a Carmel resident and freeway opponent — students from many science classes were encouraged to write.

Planting a seed

"I planted the seed and that was all," said Hohenberger. "This was not an assignment. Naturally, I have my own opinions, and there wasn't an assignment."

"People need to start thinking more

Author: Carmel is model city in 'post-modern age'

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL-BY-the-Sea is a model city in the "post-modern age," where "rampant individualism" is tempered by the values and interests of the entire community.

So said author Harold Gilliam, who spoke before about 150 people Monday, Feb. 22, at the Park Branch of the Harrison Memorial Library. Last year, Gilliam and wife Ann published Creating Carmel: The Enduring Vision.

"We see (in Carmel's history) the creative tension that goes back and forth since the beginning of civilization," he said. "Carmel is a microcosm of forces that emphasize the individual and the community."

This "creative tension," which has helped define societies from ancient Greece to the Renaissance Europe, can even be observed in the workings of today's small towns, Gilliam said. Consider Carmel's zoning laws. The rights as private property and neighborhood butt heads just as, he explained, "Your right to swing your arm stops at my nose." Every person operates within limits.

'Carmel is a microcosm of forces that emphasize the individual and the community.'

— Harold Gilliam

Constant visitors

Although they live in San Francisco, the Gilliams have been constant visitors to Carmel. Harold Gilliam is a staff writer at The Chronicle. After the talk Monday, he answered questions and autographed copies of the book.

Gilliam underscored another kind of creative tension — that which puts a

"Let's go back home and thaw out."

Another new, familiar face

FAMILIAR FACES continue to resurface at The Pine Cone. Last week, we alerted you to the return of artist Bill Bates and his Carmel "classics" to page two.

This week, we welcome back another old friend: Susan Cantrell, who served as The Pine Cone's society editor nine years ago. Susan has been selected to again author the column effective with the March 4 issue.

A 17-year resident of the Monterey Peninsula, Susan says she is eagerly awaiting the opportunity to "work with many of my old friends who knew me back when."

Since her stint as society editor of The Pine Cone in 1984, Susan served in a similar capacity for The (Palo Alto) Times-Tribune. She is currently a column contributor for The (Salinas) Californian and Monterey Bay Magazine.

While Susan is promising diverse coverage under the far-reaching umbrella of The Pine Cone's "Social Spotlight," she notes she is particularly partial to events that serve as fund-raisers for worthy Peninsula non-profit organizations. We'll let Susan spell out the specific criteria for column submissions in her initial effort in next week's Pine Cone. Meanwhile, Susan, welcome back...

• In the next few months, you will be noticing a new name among the newspaper's photo credits. Lowell Northrup, a senior at Robert Louis Stevenson and the chief photographer of RLS' monthly school newspaper, will serve as an intern through the end of the school year.

Big things are obviously in the offing for Lowell as he's in the enviable position of choosing a college from this impressive trio: Southern Cal, Loyola Marymount and Pepperdine...

• If you went looking for the "index" on this week's front page, sorry but we've eliminated it in favor of highlighting the week's top stories. We trust you'll encounter little difficulty navigating your way through the paper in quest of your favorite features and columns...

• We close on a sad note. Memorial services are being held today for Patricia Cunningham, a 39-year resident of Carmel and a dear friend to many in the area. Her passing serves to remind us how fortunate we are to live in a small community where somebody like Pat can make a difference and enrich us with her mere presence. She will be sorely missed.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

Great timing

Dear Editor:

In reply to Beulah Trist's letter I will tell her it would do no good to complain about the garbage noise to the Innkeepers Association. I am an innkeeper and I have written to the mayor's office for the last five years and I still am writing letters when I lose money.

I lost $500 last week so you see the city lost $50. The reason? There is a garbage truck pick-up on Fourth and Mission six days a week. Our inn sits on the corner so we hear it from four sides. The really great pickup is before 6 a.m. The truck goes down San Carlos and then backs up Fourth, the backup bell sounding like a fire alarm. Did I mention that was on Saturday morning? Great timing.

I have threatened to sit on the corner with a camcorder to prove a point. I have offered to contact all the associations. Maybe we have a retired traffic controller somewhere? Surely these pick-ups could be consolidated into two days a week, Monday and Friday. At least that way if a guest is irate on Monday I will be able to tell him he won't hear the truck on Tuesday.

It's perfectly clear

Dear Editor:

Participation in the Safe-Homes program encompasses the idea of "Safe-Parties." Parents who participate are not so naive as to believe that we can stop high school students from drinking. We do make it perfectly clear that they may not drink at our homes — and, therefore at parties at our homes and that we will be present to enforce this. Perhaps Mr. Teti did not understand the purpose of this program?

Sarah Pease

P.S. Many years ago, this community also had a program called "Safe Rides" with a dispatch system and a no-questions-asked rides set-up on weekends.

Questionable law

Dear Editor:

When the citizens of Carmel collected 460 signatures to protest the rezoning of the commercial district they gave the city council two options.

The language of the referendum says "we, the undersigned, ...request the city council to reconsider and repeal Ordinance 92-93 or submit the same to the voters at an election called for as prescribed by law."

This is a questionable law that has created considerable controversy within our community. I believe that everyone, residents, businesspersons, and the city council wants to do the right thing for the future of Carmel.

At any time over the past two and one-half years the council could have put the debated issues into the accepted process for community change, a general plan review committee. That would have given both sides an opportunity to debate the pros and cons of the question. Any Carmelites do not understand the potentially damaging ramifications of this complex law and how it dramatically alters the makeup of both the Service Commercial and the Residential Service zones. The fact that proponents of rezoning (Carla Ramsey, Jean Grace, Alan Williams, Glenn and Marian Leidig, Bob Fischer, Clint Eastwood, Phil Coniglio and Mayor Ken White) have done everything possible to avoid the General Plan process makes me all the more certain that it must be rescinded. What are they afraid of learning about the proposed changes in zoning? That is a question that every Carmel voter should demand to be answered.

I respectfully request that the council unanimously rescind their previous action and refer the issue to a general plan committee. That is a leadership position that resolves the concerns of many Carmelites. We don't have the option of "trying it out to see if it works." Once passed, we will never be able to go back. The consequences of a poor decision will remain forever.

Did you like rationing?

Dear Editor:

In a few months, we will vote to see if a desalination plant will be built that would provide us with abundant water from the ocean and shelter us from drought and repeated rationing.

Beware those who wail about the cost. Is not seven cents a day extra for the average person a real bargain?

What you get for a mere seven cents is peace of mind because the long range forecast for rain is not encouraging.

Using less underground water also slows encroaching salt water which has almost reached Salinas wells and is a threat to farming.

Ocean water is drought proof. Yes, we need a new dam but that is realistically 20 years off and we would still be vulnerable to rationing, its inconvenience and devastating effect on business.

CRA annual award unites divergent duo

THEY ARE like relatives who do not resemble one another. Brothers in arms — but of totally different persuasions.

Skip Lloyd and Noel Mapstead were selected to share the Carmel Residents Association's award of Citizen of the Year. The awards were announced Sunday, Feb. 21, at the Scout House.

The two men earned the honor based on their tireless work in opposition to the controversial Hatton Canyon freeway proposal. "I certainly couldn't imagine Noel and I taking more different approaches to the same problem," said Lloyd, an attorney and one of the founders of the Hatton Canyon Coalition.

Lloyd takes a slow-and-steady, traditional approach to waging political battles. "If you are antagonistic then you just aggravate elected officials who are doing to the best they can to make the right decisions."

Mapstead, to the contrary, is the persistent thorn in the side of all his opponents. Jim Holliday, who led the CRA committee that made the selections, may have said it best when he likened Mapstead's confrontational approach to that of "the single-minded crusader or muckraker who marches to his own tune."

The pair were selected among a dozen nominees. This fifth presentation of the Citizen of the Year award marked the first occasion to honor two individuals.

Another hometown candidate

Carmel's Bob Ernst sets sights on congress seat

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL'S BOB Ernst has only begun establishing himself as a candidate in the race for congress, but it is not too soon to start making campaign promises.

An attorney specializing in land use and environmental law, Ernst is ready to sign a contract — literally, not figuratively. He will sign his name on the dotted line that he will serve no more than six years as congressman, and claim no health benefits "until everyone in my district has universal health coverage."

The agreement constitutes a statement of sorts for Ernst, 40, a Carmel resident since 1982. The Republican candidate hopes to revitalize the institution of the "citizen statesman," as distinguished from the professional politician.

"I have no intention of using this (congress seat) as a stepping stone," he said confidently.

Ernst, who is married and has two children, is not the only one forecasting victory. There are some two dozen serious contenders for the 17th congressional district, which was the 16-year realm of Leon Panetta, now serving as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Following the departure of Panetta, Gov. Pete Wilson scheduled a special congressional primary election for April and a runoff for June.

Hometown candidates

For such a small town, Carmel has quite a few hometown candidates. After all, also in the race are Assemblyman Sam Farr, D-28th District, and two Republican political neophytes, Stephen Henderson and Darrin Smolinski. All live within or near the city limits.

BOB ERNST

Henderson and Smolinski, like Ernst, have spoken of the need for fresh ideas, and the need to hear from unentrenched voices.

Ernst, like others, believes the departure of Panetta has opened up the field to newcomers and to Republicans. The candidate is an interesting blend, assuming a strong conservative stance on fiscal matters but an enterprising approach to environmental issues.

CHS students push for campus condom distribution

By SCOTT BREARTON

WHILE CARMEL Unified School District administrators are not yet ready to install condom vending machines in the bathrooms at Carmel High School, they have agreed to open up dialogue with the Associated Student Body (ASB)on the issue of condom distribution on campus.

"The general consensus of the students on campus is that we want condoms to be available to students who want to use them — because of the large number of sexually active students at the school," said Drew Teti, Carmel High's appointed ASB representative.

"A lot of people think we shouldn't hand out condoms on campus without parental consent," said Teti, "but the fact is, our students don't get parental consent before having sex."

According to ASB President Lance Thompson, the student body is in the process of drafting a memorandum "announcing that the ASB would like to look into the issue of condom distribution at the high school."

The Carmel High ASB has contacted school administrators in Los Angeles and San Francisco about successful condom distribution programs there, according to Thompson. He praised The Ultimatum, Carmel High's new underground newspaper, for raising awareness about the issue of accessible condoms for teens.

Citing the idea of a condom vending machine in restrooms, Thompson said there must be "some way to give kids easier access to condoms without having to go to Long's."

As for the notion that accessible condoms will encourage promiscuity among high school students, Thompson disagreed. "We don't think that giving kids easier access to condoms will induce them to have sex."

"An educational institute"

"Regardless of whether or not condoms will actually be distributed (on campus)," said Thompson, "the point is that we get something done and people are made more aware. It's important because we think the school is an educational institute, and that education should go beyond just reading, writing and arithmetic."

CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin agreed that talking about the issue is a healthy process: "I'm with Lance in that I'd hope they (students) would open up dialogue with parents, staff and the community."

Baldwin also suggested the ASB get input from the district's Health Advisory Committee.

CHS principal Marie Ishida said she would like to open dialogue with students, parents and the community. "Our position is that, as an administration, we nothing about the use of condoms," said Teti. "When asked about the effectiveness of condoms for AIDS prevention, he said, 'Kids shouldn't be having sex until they're married anyway.'"

Teti said the speaker produced information about condom use "only after he was questioned several more times." That "tended to turn off a lot of kids," Teti said. "The fact is these kids are having sex. This gentleman coming in and telling them not to isn't going to change that."

Ishida disagreed with Teti's assessment of the guest speaker. "He did speak about abstinence, and he spoke about it very clearly as a sure way of not contracting the HIV virus. However, he also talked very clearly about student choices, that need dialogue between all three groups. It's not just a student issue, in my mind.

"No one group should say no before all sides have been able to express their views," Ishida said.

Unprotected

The results of an informal survey about student sexual activity surfaced in The Ultimatum Jan. 14. From the survey, the anonymous reporter concluded that 61 percent of CHS students are sexually active and, of those, 80 percent claimed to have had unprotected intercourse at least once.

Thompson said he believed the survey was accurate.

Teti agreed: "I think that, if anything, the Ultimatum survey on sexual activity was conservative. A large part of the test group were lower-classmen, who generally aren't as sexually active as upperclassmen."

Students generally agreed that Carmel High's health class — which contains a sex education section — given during the sophomore year is informative. But is it enough?

"We want safe sex to become a part of daily life, not just the health class," Thompson said.

Teti criticized a guest speaker at last week's AIDS rally for being "extremely influenced by his religious beliefs."

"In his initial presentation, he said

CHS sophomore, Jamie Lawn, selected for leadership program

By SCOTT BREARTON

JAMIE LAWN, a sophomore at Carmel High School, has been nominated to attend the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation (HOBY) Northern California Leadership Seminar this spring.

Lawn was chosen for the program based on her demonstrated leadership and potential for continued leadership growth. She will join more than 220 students representing as many high schools from throughout Northern California who will meet April 16-18 at Mission Springs Conference Center in Scotts Valley.

It's no surprise Lawn was selected to attend the leadership conference, as she has been active in student government since the eighth grade.

"I was freshman class president last year, and I'm sophomore class president this year," Lawn said.

"Being in student government gets you involved. You meet a lot of new people and make new friends. It makes you feel like you're doing something worthwhile, rather than just doing nothing. It makes your life more exciting."

Youth's portrait of hunger honored

CRAIG BROWN, a third-grader at Robert Louis Stevenson Lower-Middle School, has been awarded a $50 savings bond for his poster design illustrating how to best feed hungry people.

Brown's work was chosen from among 25 total entries in a contest sponsored by Monterey Peninsula Outreach, and will be featured in a poster promoting its spring fund-raiser. All students participating in the poster contest were from Katie Moore's third-grade art class at RLS Lower-Middle School.

"We didn't know who the kids were until after our selection was made," said David McIntyre, public relations chairman of Monterey Peninsula Outreach. Four local steering committee members judged the 25 entries.

"There was one poster that depicted hunger better, but this was a more colorful, livelier piece," McIntyre said.

The poster itself will be displayed throughout Monterey County beginning March 25, kicking off a fund-raising campaign called "Taste of the Nation on the Monterey Peninsula."

The April 25 event at the Doubletree Hotel will feature an evening of food and drink provided by a long list of Peninsula contributors.

All proceeds from the event will go to providing food for people in need, through Monterey Peninsula Outreach and the Food Bank of Monterey County.

Markets serve as food collection sites for MCAP Pantry

By JOHN DETRO

THE NON-PROFIT Monterey County AIDS Project assigns itself a big job: preventing the spread of HIV disease and "AIDS-phobia" along with "improving the quality of life for HIV-infected persons, their families, their friends."

A major plank in that improvement program is the MCAP Food Pantry which now provides edibles "and assorted dry goods to more than 55 individuals living with HIV/AIDS (and their families)."

That figure was on a fact sheet handed out at Albertson's Market in Carmel Rancho Center by MCAP Volunteer Coordinator Jim Ritter.

The MCAP Food Drive schedule puts representatives at Albertson's the third Saturday of each month and at Nob Hill Market in Monterey every first Saturday. Shoppers are asked to place what they can on the collection tables. Next dates: Nob Hill on March 6 and March 20 at Albertson's.

"The Food Pantry relies heavily on volunteer support and donations," the sheet said. "There's a small budget to supplement the stock with essentials not collected at food drives. Gifts of cash always help."

Food is distributed from 1-5 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays at the MCAP office at 780 Hamilton in Seaside. Ritter: "If clients are bedridden or too weak to pick up their food, of course we make deliveries."

Jim gave out a needs list with the fact sheet: Breakfast cereal, snack foods, rice, pasta, baby food ("yes, for babies"), individual microwave meals, canned meats, canned soups and vegetables and fruits, peanut butter, jams, jellies, dried milk, sauces for pasta, fresh produce that doesn't spoil quickly.

And: "Juice, juice and more juice. Individual servings are nice. Canned, powdered or bottled. Cardboard gets crushed."

And: Toilet paper, toothpaste, vitamins, dishwashing liquid, paper towels, bath soap, shampoo, detergent, diapers for children, feminine hygiene products.

"The need is real," Ritter said. "We're extremely grateful for whatever supplies people can furnish."

Sides take shape in Sunset Center showdown

BY DOUG THOMPSON

Editor's Note: This is the second installment of a three-part series on the proposed renovation and improvements to Sunset Cultural Center. Last week, Brian Donoghue, the city's cultural director, explored the issue from his perspective; this week, a look at some of the citizens' concerns.)

IN THE TV game show, Jeopardy, the one who correctly offers up the most questions typically is the winner.

Howard Nieman and Alan Williams, two of the key players who are troubled by the proposed renovation of Carmel's Sunset Center, are currently asking the majority of questions, but they contend that isn't getting them very far. What they're looking for, Nieman and Williams say, are answers.

Both members of Carmel Citizens for Good Government (CCGG), Nieman and Williams maintain they're not anti-culture, but rather they're looking out for the future of the city. Nieman's worries focus on the financial feasibility of such a project, while Williams says he's willing to stand behind the renovation but only if the public is assured of getting the answers to several key questions.

"My main concern is whether we (Carmel) can afford it," Nieman said of the facility's remodeling. "It's an important question in light of the city's past and current budget situation."

Concerns about proposal

Nieman says he has both short- and long-range concerns about the proposal. Most immediate, he says, is the possibility the Carmel City Council may vote as early as March to request proposals from qualified architects for a feasibility study that is expected to cost the city $30,000. That study, when completed, will provide the city with a preliminary cost-estimate and budget based upon that program and a schematic design for the renovation. Thus, a tangible figure would be available relative to the overall cost of such an undertaking.

But Nieman, like Williams, is balking at the idea that Carmel can afford this initial monetary plunge.

"I'm not opposing culture," Nieman said. "But in the past, the council has put the cart before the horse and has made a lot of mistakes. I don't want another one."

Williams is equally emphatic, but for different reasons.

"It's certainly a historic building and I think it (the remodeling) needs to be done," he said. "But you want to make sure the end result will serve the maximum number of people and users, not just one or two of the main users."

All users considered

Williams wants an analysis — or more specifically, a matrix — to be done that brings in the needs and desires of all users of Sunset. Since a wider stage is one of the prerequisites of the proposed renovation, Williams said he wants to see the number of current users that stand to benefit from such an improvement.

Linda Anderson, chair of both the Sunset Center Renovation Task Force and the city's Community and Cultural Commission, says the feasibility study is essential before a fund-raising campaign can be sold successfully to the private sector, which is where the project will be funded if it gets off the ground.

"This is a one-time expense," she said. "It's a loan actually. We intend to pay it back. But we have to have the results of the feasibility study is in our hand, or nobody will give us any money."

Anderson says she realizes that this is a tough time to be tapping into city funds, but "it doesn't look as though it will be better for five years out. If the city is committed to the arts and this facility, then it's time to bite the bullet."

Williams counters the notion that all $30,000 needs to be extracted from city coffers. Instead, he has issued a challenge to the Task Force that it raise half of the figure themselves.

"This is more palatable to the public. How can you ask the public to invest in their dreams if you haven't done it yourself? It is only appropriate to first come up with the seed money."

Putting up own money

If and when that is successful, Williams says, the city of Carmel could then match the Task Force's efforts. He said he volunteered to put up $500 of his own money to get the drive going.

"This is providing the project is done correctly. I'm willing to invest in Sunset Center, but it has to be done correctly."

In addition to his desires that any renovation appeals to a broader base of facility users, Williams brings up the issue of the potential impact on nearby residents, who, like the center itself, exist in the center of the R-1 residential area.

"The neighborhood tolerates it now," Williams observes, "but what happens when there are more events — that is one of the reasons why they want to do this, isn't' it?"

Solving the parking dilemma, Williams

Town hall meeting targets renovation

By PAUL WOLF

IT WAS a fitting venue for an informal discussion of Sunset Center —right there on the stage of the main theater, under the bright lights where all its inadequacies presented themselves.

The evening, Monday, Feb. 22, was a time for questions and answers, and for airing concerns about the hoped-for renovation, and about how to get the project's wheels turning.

About 70 people participated in a lively discussion in Mayor Ken White's third town hall meeting.

There were at least two key points that city officials, civic activists and residents alike agreed upon: first, the center needs many improvements if it is to continue to be competitive in the years ahead; and second, a successful cultural center translates into profits for the private sector as well as city coffers.

The arts provide nourishment to the community, but also "long-term, quality visitors" to the inns, as the Carmel Business Association has described it.

A combination of confusion and contention marked discussions of how the city must proceed with the process, but it was clear no one was interested in holding up the project.

The story was told and retold about famous musicians and singers leaving frustrated at the cramped facilities, or members of the audience who can only see half the orchestra. The attitude was along these lines: "Other city departments have been upgraded, isn't it Sunset Center's turn?"

"This is an incredible asset to the community," said planning commissioner Lindsay Hanna. "The problem is it is falling down. I don't think doing nothing is an option."

Despite all the press the plans have gotten, renovation task force members once again found themselves explaining that no expansion was contemplated, only restoration and modernization.

Moreover, it would be private money, not city funds, that would pay for the project. Even the $30,000 seed money from the city general fund would have to be returned.

Sunset Center proposal spurs concerns

says, is not an "unsurmountable problem, but it needs to be addressed."

Increase in performances?

Nieman concurs with Williams and adds that even if there are no plans to increase the seating capacity of the auditorium — which stands at 733 — the number of performances will have no choice but to increase.

"It will have to be a higher number if they're going to make this thing pencil out," Nieman says. "It only stands to reason."

Nieman goes on to say he believes there already is a parking and noise problem in the surrounding area due to events at Sunset, and any stepped-up use of the facility will serve to exacerbate the situation.

BRIAN DONOGHUE

But Nieman's chief concerns zero in on the affordability and practicality of such a renovation, now and in the future, even if the project is privately funded.

In a Jan. 22 letter to Mayor White, Nieman wrote that he was interested "in developing a fuller understanding of the financial and budget situation at Sunset Center." To that end, Nieman requested information on the Performance Carmel series, a popular program introduced by Brian Donoghue, the city's cultural director.

Nieman said the "information will be of great value in understanding the effect of Sunset Center ... on city finances. This kind of information will assist the community in understanding the role of Sunset Center as a performing arts center in Carmel as well as the cost to the taxpayer of operating such a facility."

Nieman went on to write that "we should all be aware of the costs, if any, to the taxpayer from running Sunset Center as a performing arts facility and thus be in a position to determine whether other city services are being impacted as a result."

Compiling a response

White, in a letter date Feb. 8, said Greg D'Ambrosio, acting city administrator, is currently compiling the financial data Nieman has requested. D'Ambrosio says the process is time-consuming, and that Nieman should receive the information he's seeking "in the next several days."

"I don't think the city should hold anything back," Nieman says. "It seems these answers should be made available. They should share the information with the public. We certainly don't have all the facts."

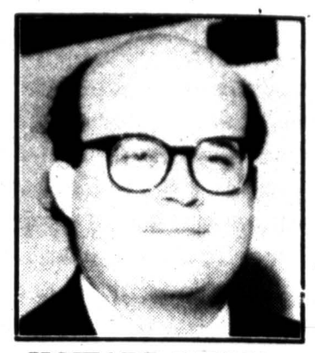
ALAN WILLIAMS

At Monday night's Town Hall meeting focusing on the Sunset Center, similar concerns were expressed by members in the audience.

As he did in his letter of Feb. 8 to Nieman, White has promised answers to the public's questions. White said the $30,000 feasibility study should not be looked upon as a gift from the city, and is comforted by the belief "that there are a number of ways to repay the city."

White said he feels that it would cost Carmel more to continue sitting on its hands in this matter than it would by acting.

"Sunset Center is an old elementary school that has never been brought up to date," he said. "We've got a facility that will cost us a lot of money if we don't bring it up to date. As it is now, it's embarrassing."



HOWARD NIEMAN

Even though concerns about the proposed renovation have been raised by individuals like Nieman, Williams, former mayor Barney Liaolo and others, Anderson still is confident the project has broad community support.

"Every time I go to the Post Office, people come up to me and say, 'I like what's happening. It's about time.'"

As for concerns that a renovated Sunset Center would cost the taxpayers even more, Anderson says she shares Donoghue's belief that it will be less of a problem to maintain because of fewer problems.

She has high hopes that the city council will continue to register a majority of support for the project. "I know it's hard, but if looked at as an investment which brings great return, it will happen."

If Nieman and Williams have any say, there are many questions that need to be answered before the issue should appear on the council's agenda. In other words, they're not ready for the game to move into final Jeopardy.

(Next week: How have other communities dealt with this type of issue, and what is the correlation between culture and business?)

IMPORTANT DECISONS are in the offing for the Sunset Cultural Center.

New director at Bay School excited about 'ideal' situation

By SCOTT BREARTON

KATHY MILLER

KATHY MILLER, new director at Bay School – a Carmel parent nursery school – calls the opportunity to work with parents and their children an "ideal" situation.

Miller was hired Jan. 13, replacing Joan Lynch, who served as director for the last four years.

"I'm very excited about it," Miller said. "Bay School has a magic of its own, with its location and history. There are parents here whose grown siblings have attended Bay School."

Built in 1879 by whalers who lived at Point Lobos, Bay School originally served as a one-room schoolhouse for many of the area's founding families.

Situated adjacent to Monastery State Beach in a shady eucalyptus grove, the peaceful setting lends itself to learning. A miniature working farm – complete with ducks, chickens and a goat mascot – sits on the grounds next to the classic old red and white schoolhouse. It's worth visiting as a historical site alone.

Bay School – a cooperative nursery school – is unique in that it serves as a working laboratory in which parents are also students, practicing the art of parenting. Members are required to enroll in a parent education class, a Carmel Unified School District-sponsored adult school class.

Parents work with teachers to understand child development and how to engage children in a way that promotes positive growth and development. Members are required to attend three meetings per month, as well as work three hours per week at the school site. Students range in age from three to five years.

Program goals include helping children develop social skills, expand vocabulary, develop a positive self-image and understand their environment through group projects, readings, discussions and field trips.

Experience

Miller has worked with children from ages three to 18 for the last 14 years, as both a teacher and counselor. Her experience includes working as assistant director and director for private grade schools and preschools.

"I would like to create in the children a desire to love to learn," Miller said.

In her previous job, Miller worked for the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District, serving as director of a students have the choice to be sexually active or not... He was treating them as responsible decision-makers."

While it may be unrealistic, it turns out there's a good reason for discouraging teens from becoming sexually active in an age of deadly sexually transmitted diseases... It's the law.

"By law now, we are required — as part of the sex education component in our curriculum — to teach abstinence as the 100 percent sure way of not getting pregnant or catching some type of communicable disease," Ishida said.

"We know darn good and well that kids are going to be sexually active," Ishida continued. "We have to present the whole picture."

Rosemary Montgomery, assistant superintendent at CUSD, sumarized the district's sex education program:

•Fifth grade – students are introduced to their bodies, and given a brief introduction to HIV/AIDS.

•Seventh grade – Carmel Middle School science teachers present a unit on sexual reproduction.

•Eighth grade – A six-week unit on health issues is required, including a sex education component.

•Tenth grade – A health class offered to sophomores includes a section on sex education and sexually transmitted diseases.

Parents can ask that their children be excluded from any sex education instruction at any time, according to Montgomery, and "are welcome to view all educational materials prior to use in class."

Dr. Craig Cain announces the opening of his natura l Healing Arts Clinic in Carmel...

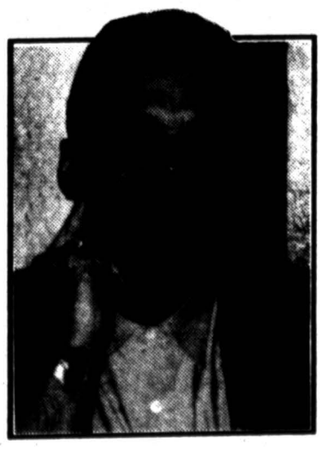
The clinic is new, but Dr. Cain is well-established in his field. He has operated his own clinic in the San Jose area for the past four years. Like many, he was attracted to Carmel by its beauty – but also by the awareness of the interest in natural healing demonstrated in this community.

CAIN HEALING ARTS CENTER

Dr. Cain is a graduate of Palmer College of Chiropractic West in Sunnyvale, CA. He explains that his Dutch-Amerian Indian heritage, from early on, has given him a special inteest in natural healing. He became involved in the field about 15 years ago while studying martial arts and philosophy. Thereafter, he studied shiatsu and accupressure, and learned to speak Japanese as a means of becoming more familiar with Asian thought.

His interest in internal energy and its application in healing – and, of course, in chiropractic medicine – has enabled him to fuse Western and Eastern approaches. Hence his system, which he terms the Kiso Chiropractic Technique.

The idea is to rid the body of subluxations (misalignments), which block the flow of the natural life force energy. After the subluxations are removed from the skeletal system, the muscle and energy systems are balanced using shiatsu, muscle massage and trigger point massage. Then there is the KI therapy – a method of channeling Universal life energy through the injured area. Incidentally, in Japanese, Kiso means "foundation" or "root." After all, the foundation for health is created by removing the obstacles to your innate energy and balance. When this is accomplished, the result is total good health.



Dr. Cain also does full-body massage or shiatsu massage. His chiropractic care is a combination of all the arts above, which is the Kiso technique.

Dr. Cain invites you to visit the Cain Healing Arts Center located at 7th Avenue and San Carlos Street in downtown Carmel. His wife, Eika, also welcomes you to the center with a cup of Japanese tea. Call 622-0340 for an appointment and office hours.

CFD's adopted, adored fire engine gets away at auction

By PAUL WOLF

IT WAS too good to be true. Yet high hopes remain for the Carmel Fire department to acquire a new engine that is at least roughly similar to the model that slipped through its hands.

It all starts with a sleek and mobile wildland firefighting rig. It was, for a short time, the apple of the CFD's eye. And the fire staff was preparing to permanently adopt the useful engine for a nominal cost.

About losing the rig, Fire Chief Bill Hill said, "It's a disappointment, but it's not crushing."

The saga goes back to last summer when the department got the chance to adopt a 1976 "class 3" engine for a token $80 a month from the state's Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. Although it was only a three-month program, fire officials believed fixing up and maintaining the surplus vehicle was worth the time and effort.

A rare chance

It was, for one thing, a rare chance to practice certain training maneuvers. A piece like that — with its "pump-and-roll capability," allowing it to suppress a fire while moving — was a tremendous asset in fighting blazes around Mission Trails Park and Pescadero Canyon, they explained.

The crew used many off-duty hours to spruce up the vehicle; they even put in their own spare change for the rig's monthly rent. All the while, they remained optimistic that the department would either get dibs on the equipment, or outbid other agencies, when it came time for the surplus engine to be sold.

When the auction was staged in Davis, Calif., earlier this month, 140 agencies — far more than were present at last year's event — put bids on 14 vehicles.

As it turned out, it wasn't really an auction and there weren't really bids. The prices were fixed by the state, and the equipment was awarded via a random process. Carmel had no special advantage, despite all the work that was put into the rental.

"The odds were against our getting anything," said Asst. Fire Chief John Willett, who went to Davis as the department's representative.

Therefore, engines went for prices like $6,500 and $8,500, but most bidders went away empty-handed. Willett put in bids for three engines, including the one the city had been coveting.

"It was excellent having that rig," Willet remarked. "Emotionally, I think we all would have liked to have this engine."

Now the thing to do keep watch on other auctions and sales. "We are already looking at other counties throughout the state to see what kinds of engines they have to offer," Willett said.

Business to meet education at community forum

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE NEEDS of employers in the 1990s and the modification of education to meet those needs will be investigated formally for the first time at a community forum Friday.

Presented by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce Visitors and Convention Bureau and the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District, the conference will be held Friday, Feb. 26, from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Inn at Spanish Bay in Pebble Beach.

The theme of the event is "Education is Everybody's Business: The Skills Employers Want, The Skills Employees Need."

Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Vance Baldwin will be attending the forum, according to Rosemary Montgomery, assistant superintendent at CUSD.

Geared specifically to members of the business community, educators, students and parents, the program will include break-out discussions during which participants can examine the needs of business and the community for tomorrow's workforce, what business wants educators to know about business, model education programs and their local implementation, and partnerships between businesses and schools.

Educational trends

Management consultant and futurist Dr. Leo Coleman will deliver the keynote address entitled "Employees of the 1990s and Basic Needs in the Year 2000," giving an overview of educational trends.

Coleman has an international reputation in training and development. His career includes key human resource positions with major firms in the private sector, along with experience in all phases of training and development programs in government, business and industry. Coleman was a California State University professor and is currently working with private industry councils, regional occupational programs and community colleges.

preschool program at Olson Elementary School in Marina.

In her new position, Miller, who has a bachelor's degree in Counseling with a minor in Early Childhood Education, will be responsible for overseeing the parent education class.

Twenty-one children are currently enrolled at Bay School, attending a 9 a.m. to noon program. If the demand warrants it, Miller hopes to offer an afternoon session in the fall.

Because preschool is a child's first introduction to the school system, Miller says they come naturally with a positive desire to learn. "It's part of being a child," she said.

Miller says her new position is ideal for any teacher–being able to work with parents and their children.

"It's like a team working together," Miller said. "I can't think of any place I've been made more welcome."

"I traded a house full of rooms for a life full of friends"

The decision to move was a difficult one, but I was tired of cooking and cleaning and quite honestly ... being alone.

Valley Heights was a natural choice for me. As I started exploring my options and talking to people in the community, I discovered that I already knew several residents. They were very happy with the services and the quality of life at Valley Heights.

The owners, Richard Murphy and Kelly Chilcote, have operated Valley Convalescent Hospital for the last thirty years. As personal friends of mine I know the level of commitment they feel toward their residents.

I have discovered a whole new life. Free of the everyday chores, I am now using the extra time to attend exercise classes, book reviews and seminars. I have enjoyed making new friends and the challenge of living in an active and stimulating environment.

Yes, the decision was difficult but now the living is easy!

Another Carmel entry for congress

For starters, he opposes the Clinton economic program, describing it as "front-loaded with taxes, back-loaded with cuts."

"It's my foremost desire to cut government spending," he explained.

But he spoke of a useful application of new taxes — in the context of preserving the environment. Automobiles, he said, should be taxed "based on their pollution, not based on their value."

Such a plan of taxing polluters would "maximize liberty but still keep people accountable...The regulatory process doesn't like to focus on individuals, only corporations."

Joining battles

Ernst said he is more qualified than other Republicans in the field because "I have fought many fights, and others haven't."

He noted, for starters, his front-line opposition against 1990's Prop. 128, the so-called "Big Green" initiative, which was soundly defeated.

While he has not held a political office, he said his work and his volunteer service qualify him for the job. And as the contract can vouch, he would be the kind of politician who knows how long he is welcome.

Author says debates significant to Carmel wedge between the goals of progress and preservation.

The names of past mayors are like symbols of the opposing camps, those sides that held one value more closely to heart than the other.

Said Gilliam: "Gunnar Norberg (1976-1980) wanted to roll back the engines of progress...but Barney Laiolo thought a few changes could be made."

In fact, Gilliam cited Perry Newberry, sworn in back in 1922, as speaking out against paving of Carmel streets. "The power has swung back and forth."

These kinds of debates have been significant to Carmel, Gilliam explained. If the modern view means "bigger is better, and more growth is better," the post-modern view is "recognizing more and more the value of community." The author believes this puts Carmel at the forefront of cities, leading the "post-modern trends."

Gilliam cited the 2016 Committee Report, which envisions the village at the time of its centennial. The report urges that homes will be in scale with the landscape; that there will be no expansion of the commercial sector; that "traffic-calming" devices will be in place in the neighborhoods.

"This sounds heretical to the modern ideal," said Gilliam, noting that traffic-calming principles fly in the face of the notion of getting wherever you can as fast as you can.

HAROLD GILLIAM

Naturally, the ideal vision of the future says much about present notions of the town's identity, he noted.

Over time there has developed "a distinct Carmel attitude or personality," Gilliam said. "Maybe it's because of the sound of the surf. Maybe it's because of the smell of the pines."

Resurrecting the freeway

By Joseph Noto

I'M SPEAKING as a private citizen and a 40-year resident of the Monterey Peninsula.

I have entered a state of mourning for the political demise of supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman as a candidate for re-election.

I couldn't believe my eyes when on Feb. 11, I read that this elected official gave up on the Hatton Canyon freeway.

To my sorrow, this lady has failed to grasp the enormity of her decision and the detrimental effect that the loss of funding for the freeway will impact the peninsula and the county.

She refuses to believe Cal-Trans and Greg Albright, Cal-Trans project coordinator, that the alternate 1-C modified freeway project is the only prudent alternative to support.

Based on the mission of the agency, it cannot select another alternative. It is long-term, obtainable and appropriate.

She must understand her power as supervisor that she can kill the project. She exhibits a certain naivete that the community doesn't want a freeway and she mistakenly thinks there is a smaller scale project (for which there is no present funding) that will serve the community.

A smaller scale project is not better than nothing, if in the long run it does not achieve the relief intended. Quick fixes are never adequate where long-term solutions are needed and will ultimately be more costly.

This $42 million is sorely needed to boost the economy on the peninsula and the county. This $42 million will be recycled for another $40 million to $60 million spent for necessities by those who earned the money.

Politically she has demonstrated that she is so desirous of getting re-elected that she is listening to the opponents of the freeway, and perhaps shares their concerns about the intrusion into the wetlands(what wetland?), and the loss of the Monterey pine forests and the non-endangered species of shrubs, plants, wildlife, etc. that are in the canyon.

She has joined supervisor Sam Karas who has long opposed the canyon project for whatever reasons he has deemed important to his fourth district constituents.

Both of these supervisors have spent county funds going to Washington, D.C. to appeal for some $100 million to prop up the county's economy for the conversion of Fort Ord. Our soon-to-be failing economy could receive a boost with this $42 million.

It is available without begging for it.

Political power sometimes distorts those in power when their desire to get elected eventually alienates enough of their constituents, that they find themselves out of office because they listened to the wrong drummer.

It's not the rules that have changed. We just have a new president and a new team who have insurmountable problems to resolve. Throwing a $42 million for some other county to use is not very wise nor fair to their constituents.

The community is not really that divided. We just have a dedicated minority that want no growth and they are willing to sacrifice the future needs of the community to satisfy their goals. Even a blind person can see that.

Supervisor Strasser Kauffman refuses to believe that the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers will ever grant a 404 permit for the freeway. She forgets that the U.S Army Corps of Engineers is empowered to serve the public interest, and she should use her influence on behalf of her constituents to see that they too fulfill their obligations. Her constituents will let her know where they stand on June 8.

Supervisor Strasser Kauffman further doesn't want to believe that the California Transportation Commission is simply a funding agency, and that Cal-Trans has the long-standing responsibility for planning and engineering policy.

I am madder than Hades that for 40 years this project has been stymied by various groups to further their selfish goals, even to the detriment of their community.

I love this peninsula, and I like to think that Col. Allen Griffin's editorial on the spirit of the Monterey Peninsula still preserves the qualities expressed.

The business community has much to gain by the construction of the freeway. Widening Highway 1 will detrimentally impact the residents in south Carmel Hills, Handley Drive and part of Hatton Field.

Most importantly, future high school students will be exposed to increased noise and air pollution and increased traffic hazards.

If we lose the money for the freeway, I understand that there are many counties who will be glad to obtain these funds. I don't know if I can feel confident of any future decisions that Strasser Kauffman can make to restore my confidence in her judgment.

Thank God our senator has been and still supports the Hatton Canyon freeway as the only solution to our traffic congestion.

Let me hear her say that the freeway issue has been resurrected. How appropriate for the Easter season.

ecologically and begin carpooling to reduce traffic and air pollution," wrote Lynn Damiano, age 13.

A few pieces of correspondence appear rather sophisticated in style and substance, leading one to believe many of the students treated the chance to write as a research project, or perhaps received help from some knowledgeable adult sources.

One student, Annelise Moore, writing on behalf of the high school's SMART Club, or Students Making a Right Tomorrow, said, "The construction of the freeway would cause irreparable damage to an important watershed that feeds the aquifers upon which the city of Carmel and surrounding areas depend for water."

"In addition to this inexcusable damage, the destruction of plants, including the endangered Hickman's Onion...would cause much erosion which would pollute the Carmel River and eventually the lagoon. It should be noted that any harm done to the lagoon would have a disastrous effect on the bird sanctuary..."

For the most part, however, there was a refreshing simplicity in evidence. "Building a new freeway," wrote Courtney Keller of Carmel Valley, "should not be a requirement when we could do many things to make a new freeway unnecessary."

And then there is Joe Bishop, an eighth-grader. He wrote: "I am hoping that as I grow up...and have kids, that they will have a nice place to live and grow up in. My future, as well as other children around the world, depends on having an environment to live in."

dent and freeway supporter , was among a few who responded directly to the young contingent.

"Listen to your elders," he said. "Do you young people think we can go back to the days of the horse and buggy? Progress is extremely important."

Revisited were subtopics under the Hatton Canyon umbrella, ranging from levels and the details of funding.

The public hearing had to be continued because only a few more than half of those who wanted to speak received a chance. Their turn is coming up on March 24.

TRADE MAGAZINE NOMINATES LOCAL FIRM FOR AWARD

As a Special Events Magazine Gala Award nominee in the category of Best Event Coordinated for a Corporation, Budget Under $30,000, Host Convention Services' President, Linda Law will travel to New Orleans to participate in the awards ceremony and celebration that closes the annual trade show and convention, The Special Event Nine.

Host Convention Services, a Carmel-based Destination Management Company, garnered their nomination for the western-style "Barbecue at Clint's Place," produced for Hambrecht & Quist, Inc. The event took place in October 1991, in the two barns at former Mayor Clint Eastwood's Mission Ranch in Carmel.

"Our concept was to combine the glitz and neon of the '90s New West with the Old Wild West," explains Linda Law.

Design company Illusions of Grandeur carried out the theme with decor that featured black and white cowhide tablecloths over gold lame undercloths, black napkins sporting rhinestone bolo ties and neon cactus from the New West coupled with such traditional Old West standbys as a honky tonk piano player, hay bale seating around a corral stage and a chuckwagon filled with spatterwear, plenty of hearty chow and a cascade of sunflowers.

Town hall meeting

Village meeting about labor center disrupted

By SUSAN BECK

A TOWN hall meeting in Carmel Valley designed to gain a consensus about an ongoing issue to deal with day-laborers was disrupted by four advocates of the Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR).

Stewart Clough, a member of the Carmel Valley Day-Labor Referral Service committee said the meeting was scheduled to address the day-laborers who wait for work at Delfino Place in the village without accessible sanitation facilities.

More than 50 people attended the meeting last Wednesday night with intentions of discussing a proposed Day-Labor Center as a solution to the problem.

"The people from FAIR were so professional and intimidating," said Clough. "We never got to the agenda."

The job center is not intended to be exclusively for Hispanic workers, said Clough. It is designated to include anyone looking for a job in the area.

The question of whether the day-labor center would require proof of legal status for prospective workers was a key point in the dispute.

Several other areas in California that incorporated a day-labor center into their communities have opted not to be a policing agency. Thus, they don't check to see if a person has legal status when they sign up for work.

According to a FAIR information pamphlet, the organization claims to be the only effective national advocacy group working to set reasonable levels of legal immigration, and wants the government to control illegal immigration by securing U.S. Borders and enforcing employer sanctions.

Their position is that a day-labor center would only encourage more illegal workers to seek work in Carmel Valley.

"One of the men said he was a contractor," noted Clough. "He said that he thought it would be a good idea for the military to patrol the Mexican-American borders. If anyone tried to cross into the states, he said, they should be shot."

The advocates of FAIR were at the meeting to present their own agenda, said Clough.

"We are not trying to fight immigration laws," he added. "We are not reinventing the wheel. We are just copying centers that have already been established. Our goal is to not to ask the community if this is how they want the center to run. The goal is to solve a sanitation problem. We never got to first base."

William Melendez, past state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) said that FAIR is an

Outreach programs

Bean bagging builds values

By SUSAN BECK

BEAN BAGGING is a hit at All Saints' Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley. But, what is it?

It's part of the school's Outreach programs that officially started in 1988, said the Rev. Paul Danielson, the school's chaplain, but has been active for about eight years.

Every Friday, a different class bags beans for migrant families throughout the Salinas Valley.

Assisted by parents, the students often bag up to 1,000 pounds of beans in one session. Students also volunteer to assist in food delivery to the families.

"The program helps people get outside of themselves," said Danielson. "They give out of self-denial for a worthy cause."

Five themes

There are five main themes included in the Outreach program.

In addition to the Bean Bagging Project, there is the Haiti Sister School Project: Saint Patrick's Hinche.

The project includes a Lenten "Love Loaf" offering of up to $1,400 for school supplies, toothbrushes, toys, a personal letter, drawing, and photo to a student in Haiti.

"If it weren't for the help of outside organizations, Haiti would not survive," said Danielson.

Then, there are the weekly Soup Kitchen trips to Dorothy's Place in Salinas to set up, help cook, serve the meal and clean-up for clients that are homeless street people. The emphasis is placed on courtesy, respect and caring.

And, once each month, the entire sixth grade devotes one full class to making seasonal greeting cards, bookmarks, or placemats for the residents of the Medical Center unit at Carmel Valley Manor.

Also, Adopt-A-Grandparent is a program for students of all grades. There are 10 grandparents and 30 children matched according to common interests for outings, visits, and attendance at school events.

Other programs include Christmas caroling to convalescent care facilities and raffles by parents to raise funds for Outreach projects.

Karen Woodward, the coordinator for Outreach programs, said the students volunteer an average of one-half hour weekly throughout the year.

"It develops character," said Woodward. "It's not something where we say, 'OK, it's Outreach time,' we think about it all the time."

Danielson believes that "service is the rent we pay for being here on earth. The kids understand that it isn't all take — it's giving, too."

He added that there is a new wave of volunteerism is the country.

"What I see is a good group of older retired people and very young people getting involved," said Danielson.

Woodward said that, through the programs, the students become more aware of human needs.

More and more teachers, she said, are integrating volunteer projects into their curriculum. "It's becoming a part of the fabric of the school."

And, Woodward loves her job.

"It's not really a job — it's a way of life for my family. We enjoy making something really valuable out of nothing."

Danielson said that a lot of people have a desire to give, but don't know how to go about it. "This way they know it's going to help someone directly."

He said that his motivation in the program is the sheer immensity of the need.

"The feeling of being empowered to meet the need through the programs and seeing the change in the hearts of those who help is the reward. That's how I get my fulfillment."

Carmel River

Public should know state's position before June election

By SUSAN BECK

THE RECENT suggestion by the California State Water Resources Control Board for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to continue a moratorium on new connections comes as no surprise.

At least, not for Patricia Bernardi, chair of the Residents Water Committee.

"The state has warned the water district a number of times," said Bernardi. "They are not taking the advice as seriously as they should."

Eighty-five percent of the water used for CalAm connections comes from the Carmel River in Carmel Valley. And, the district may have to use less water if the state decides there is a deficit on the river.

The ultimate decisions on the use of river water in California are made by the state board, which conducted hearings in Sacramento and Monterey last year about water rights to the Carmel River.

Representatives of local committee such as the Residents Water Committee and the Carmel River Steelhead Association complained to the state board that the amount of water CalAm pumps from the river is damaging.

It is expected that a decision as to whether CalAm is overdrafting Carmel River will be made by the state board this summer.

But, that's not soon enough for Bernardi.

She maintains that the public has a right to know if CalAm's water supply will be restricted before the June election.

The election ballot will included a choice for voters to build a desalination plant to solve the peninsula's water problems caused by the last six years of drought and the real possibility of future droughts.

The desalination plan, said Bernardi, is to use half of the produced water for drought reserve and the rest for new CalAm connections. But, she added, all of the water may be used to offset the illegal diversion from CalAm.

"People would not vote for desalination if they weren't going to get anything out of it," said Bernardi. "It appears that CalAm had no clear claim of water rights all these years. They have illegally pumped and sold water out of the Carmel River."

This means, she said, that the deficit must be made up from another source. And, if the desalination plant is voted for the obvious choice would be to use all the water from desal to be used for present consumers to offset Carmel River.

"I've heard people say that CalAm should pay for the desalination plant because they have collected revenue for years on water that they had no legal right to sell," said Bernardi.

"People should have the facts in hand before voting. I think that without the facts any election would be moot."

Youth center's new director says kids need a place to go

By SUSAN BECK

KAREN DAVIS-Brown, new director of Development and Public Relations for the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center, brings to the position a 25-year background of working with children.

A native of Illinois, she has a master's degree in family studies from the University of Illinois and a bachelor's degree from Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in English and religion.

She was a director of Parents Anonymous working with abusive parents and a foster care caseworker for a child welfare agency.

Eighteen months ago, she moved to the Monterey Peninsula with her husband, who is a military professor at the Naval Postgraduate School.

"Carmel Valley is similar to the rural area where I was," said David-Brown. "There are a lot of parallels. I think it's a great, unique place. The people are very friendly, open, and supportive. They are informal and very committed to their community."

The new youth center director also intends to be committed to community involvement.

"Anyone who is in this position needs to think about being here for several years because it means becoming a part of the community," said Davis-Brown.

In addition to her new position, she is the director of two other organizations: the Parish Family Ministry at All Saints' Episcopal Day School and the Foster Care Educational and Independent Living Program at Hartnell College in Salinas.

She will tackling two major projects right at the outset.

First, the community center's conversion into a youth center with programs including tutoring, recreational activities and dances.

"One thing that is very different here in

KAREN DAVIS-BROWN

California," said Davis-Brown, "is the level of children who come from families that have been divorced and are blended into another new family. And, the level of potential for drug involvement. Kids need alternatives — a place to go and have fun."

Secondly, long-range plans include a wading pool and auditorium.

Just one week into her job, she is working on the upcoming Monte Carlo Night in May, which was inspired by the former director, Kathleen Tarp.

"Kathleen laid an incredible foundation," said Davis-Brown.

The new director's immediate goals are to provide an opportunity for families to do things together, and for adolescents to have a chance to be with each other in a safe and healthy environment.

"I'm really happy to be here," said Davis-Brown. "The board has a vision of what the center can be, and I feel privileged to be a part of it."

Strong issues raised at CV village meeting anti-immigrant organization.

"In my point of view," said Melendez, "it's a racist group of people. I can't put it any clearer. They are xenophobic."

He said that the purpose of the local committee is to look for people who want to make a difference for the day-laborers and the people who employ them.

"The people from FAIR," said Melendez, "just want to create a suspicious and fearful climate. What we are trying to do is seek out people of goodwill to prepare an unequivocal solution."

Sylvia Panetta got the clear impression that everyone who spoke at the meeting wants to resolve the problem, which is the first step.

How the resolve will come about is another matter. She said that she would help the committee do whatever has to be done.

Another member of the committee, Roger Williams, said "it is a study in humanities to get sanitary facilities provided by either the county or some government agency."

Williams agreed in theory that to protect the laborer and the employer, the day-labor center should only register people who can prove legal status, but he added "it's a difficult situation."

Randy Randazzo, a committee member, said the consensus of the meeting was that a day-labor center program would be acceptable, but not if it included undocumented workers.

A committee meeting is scheduled for 5 p.m. on Monday, March 1, at The Valley Lodge on Carmel Valley Road. The meeting is to determine which direction the committee will go, said Randazzo.

The Carmel Valley Women's Club Annual Fashion Show

THE CARMEL Valley Women's Club will hold its annual fashion show on Wednesday, March 3, at the Hidden Valley Music Seminars Theater in the Carmel Valley Village.

The show, a Festival de Primavera, will be preceded by a hospitality hour with a luncheon at 11:30 a.m.

This is the Women's club 43rd annual fashion show and is different from similar events in that the models are members of the club.

The fashions are being provided by Gerry's Designer Fashions of Carmel, one of the premier fashion houses on the Monterey Peninsula.

All proceeds from the show benefit various valley organizations including the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center and the valley's fire departments.

Guests are welcome. Tickets are $18.

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Padres steamroll their way into CCS playoffs

THE PADRE boys basketball team came up with two big wins last week on their way to the number one seed in the playoffs and a 20-5 record. Carmel's high seeding gives them home court advantage, as they will play this Saturday at MPC. In addition, Carmel's R.J. Powell was named the MTAL's most valuable player, and was voted to the all-league first team along with teammate Ben Fahrer.

Last Friday Carmel finished off the regular season with an overtime win over King City, 62-57. The win boosted the Padre's record to, 9-3 (20-5 overall), which is good enough for second place in the MTAL, and nailed down the number one ranking Carmel received for the Central Coast Section Division IV playoffs. Ben Fahrer scored 15 for the Padres, R.J. Powell and Jason Lindgren each added 14, and Dean Wilson tossed in 11.

Last Tuesday the Padres took care of business against P.G. downing the Breakers by the score of 52-45. Jason Lindgren scored 14, and Ben Fahrer added 13 to help the Padres to the win.

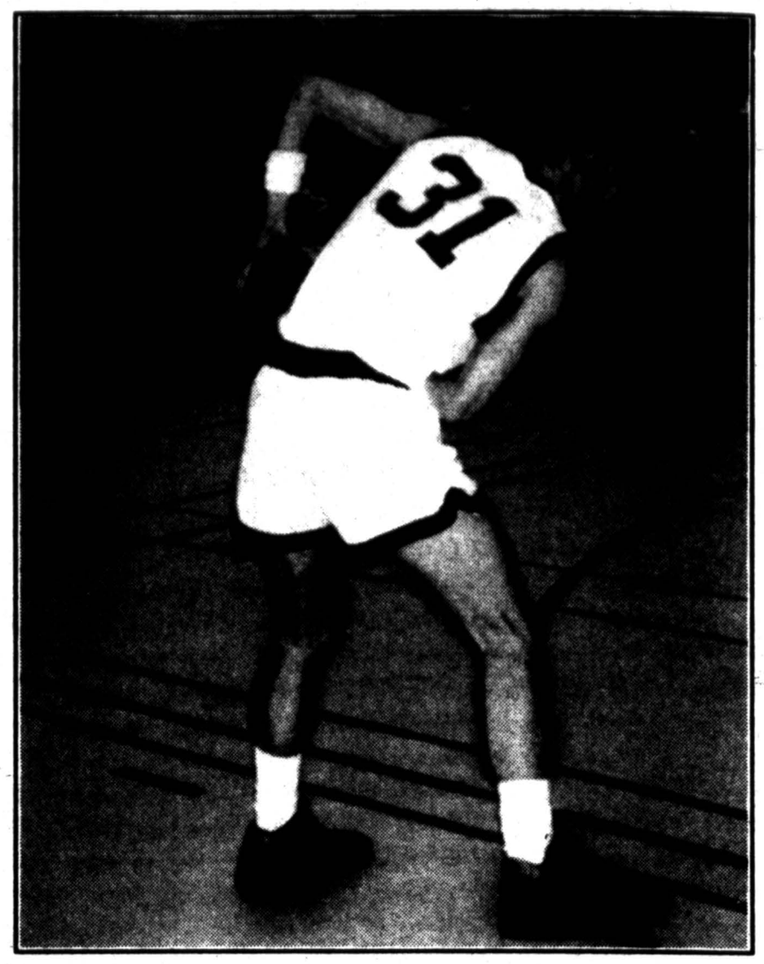
By winning their last three games of the season, the Padres have built up some steam rolling into the playoffs. Carmel is the only Division IV team with 20 wins, and they have been receiving their fair share of honors. The San Francisco Chronicle ranked them 10th in Division IV for the state of California, and labeled the "on the bubble" of the top 25 in all divisions. In addition to Powell and Fahrer being named to the all-league first team, Fahrer also received all-defensive team honors, and Nate Stiles and Jason Lindgren were voted honorable mention all-leaguers.

The real story of the season so far has been the team's balance. Despite not being the leagues top scorer, Powell was voted MVP for his ability to make his teammates better. His own numbers reflect his amazing talent—Powell averaged 16.6 points per game to go along with an average of about 6.2 rebounds and 5.0 assists. Only a junior this season, Powell should be even more exciting next year. But even more important were the numbers put up by his teammates. Many of R.J.'s assists went to Nate Stiles, who averaged 10.3 points and 6.8 rebounds for the Padres. Stile's 28 blocked shots were also a big plus for Carmel. Ben Fahrer, the teams other all-leaguer, had a productive season—he averaged 9.5 points and 4.4 rebounds while contributing tenacious defense. Fahrer usually would defend opponent's best offensive player.

Aside from Powell, Fahrer, and Stiles, center Jason Lindgren has been solid all year for the Padres, averaging 8.4 points and 5.0 rebounds per game and playing tough defense. Lindgren has adjusted to the flow of every game, and always seems to contribute where help is needed. Another bonus for the Padres going into the playoffs will be the return of starter Ryan Edwards, who was out most of the regular season. His perimeter shooting and solid defense will take some of the pressure off Dean Wilson and Jason Edwards, who have been doing an excellent job filling in for Ryan. Wilson, in addition to passing out 3.4 assists per game, shot over 61 percent from three-point range for the Padres. Overall things look bright for the Padres. The team has many talented players, and the excellent coaching job Rich Frank has done gives Carmel a good chance of winning the state championship.

Girls Basketball

The Padre-Ladies have also been successful this season, and they will join their male counterparts in the C.C.S. playoffs this weekend at MPC. Strong performances by the girls in wins over King City and P.G. lifted them to a 19-6 overall record and the number three seed in the playoffs. Last Friday against King City, Erin Kraft contributed 25 points to lead Carmel over the Mustangs, 60-39. Doreen Evans added 19 as the Padres finshed the regular season with a league mark of 10-4 and a third place finish in the MTAL. Two days before against Pacific Grove, Carmel held on in a close one, winning 55-54. Carmel's three big scorers, Erin Kraft, Doreen Evans, and Jen Rosenthal all scored in double figures, with 12, 23, and 12 respectively. Kraft and Evans were both named to the all-league first team, and Rosenthal received honarable mention. These three, with the help of point-guard Chie Ubaura and the rest of the team should fair well in the playoffs.



THE PERIMETER shooting of Padre forward Ryan Edwards (above) should help Carmel go far in the playoffs.

Special note

CHS Spring Fest '93

LAST YEAR was the first time in a long time that Carmel High School held a spring carnival. Now the Associated Student Body is working hard to give it a shot again this year, but this time they plan to make it bigger and better.

Back in the '50s, the Carmel High Spring Carnival was a big hit in the community. However, in the '60s its popularity dropped, and before long the whole idea was abandoned.

"We felt that it (last year's carnival) was successful enough to try again this year," said CHS teacher and activities director Chad Lincoln. Plus, planning will be easier this time because of all the connections from last year.

ASB president Lance Thompson says that after last year "we saw what we needed to change." For one, the carnival was on a very busy weekend for the peninsula. This year "Spring Fest '93" will be on Saturday, May 1, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Carmel High.

"We chose that day because it is traditionally the first day of spring," said Thompson. ASB is targeting the carnival toward all age groups. They are also seeking involvement and participation from other high schools and have sent invitations to RLS, Pacific Grove, Gonzales, and Monterey High Schools.

"We are trying to get three or four times as many people as last year," said ASB social commissioner Aryn Harris. Last year's carnival had a total of 27 booths, but ASB says that this year there will be a lot more.

"There's going to be lots of little surprises," said Harris. Some attractions include a huge slip and slide, live bands, and a moon bounce trampoline-tent. There is also a street dance tentatively planned following the carnival at CHS.

"It's going to be very expensive," said Harris about the upcoming carnival, "but it can be a very good fund raiser." Thompson says that ASB is not a money-making business. "Its purpose is to make school fun and interesting," he said.

ASB's secondary goal for the carnival is to break even. "The ASB is really well organized this year and I expect they'll do a great job with it," said Lincoln. "We're expecting it to be a really good time," said Thompson.

If there is anybody in the community interested in having a booth, displaying something, or contributing services to the carnival; or if there is any band who would like to perform at the carnival, they can call the ASB president at 659-5210. They can also write to Carmel High School at P.O. Box 222780, Carmel, 93921.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

To the rescue

BY NOW, you all know that I have very strong feelings about the subject of spaying and neutering. If we could teach pet owners how important it is to prevent unwanted litters, just think of the millions and millions of dogs and cats who would not be destroyed each year simply because there aren't enough homes!

Have you ever been to an animal shelter? Have you seen those sad little faces ... waiting? They're here one day, gone the next, and the thought of those tragic, unnecessary deaths just puts me away. Spaying and neutering is the answer, my friends, and must all do our part. If your dog or cat is not altered, please call your veterinarian today and make that appointment. If your neighbor's dog or cat is not altered, offer some assistance. Maybe your neighbor just doesn't realize the impact of out-of-control breeding, so talk to him or her. Help us to educate the public and make this a better place for our Best Friends.

Last week my pet foundation rescued a beautiful lab-mix and her seven babies from an animal shelter in Los Angeles. Her owners committed two cardinal sins in my book: They allowed her to become pregnant and then they dumped her and her babies just two weeks after she gave birth. At three weeks of age the puppies could not be adopted, so obviously someone had to adopt all or none. On the morning they were due to be euthanized, we took the whole family.

I'm happy to say they're with our Dr. Bartlett, eating well and in excellent shape. The puppies are adorable and we seem to have one in every color imaginable. We've already had some inquiries about the pups and they will all be placed in loving, responsible homes — with owners who will spay or neuter them at the proper time. When her kids have been placed, we will find a wonderful home for Momma and write a happy ending to this story. The downside, of course, is the thought of all the others who won't be so lucky.

Now don't forget, I need your help. Do something to help our Best Friends. Adopt a dog or cat from the animal shelter. Save a life. Spay or neuter. Help a stray. You won't be sorry and I will love you for it.

See you next week!

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

In grand style

THE SEVENTH annual Masters of Food and Wine at Highlands Inn in Carmel kicked off in grand style Tuesday night, with the "Opening Night Tasting Extravaganza" in the Fireside and Surf Rooms.

The flavors of India, Japan, Thailand, Russia, the Mediterranean and America were highlighted with Brian Whitmer, Highlands Inn, and Gerard Bechler, Patissiere Bechler in Pacific Grove, included among the elite eight chefs.

Top Hats & Pearls

The Junior League of Monterey County salutes its 30th anniversary with a gala affair, "Top Hats & Pearls," Saturday evening, Feb. 27, at the Doubletree Hotel in Monterey.

Co-chair Jean Hurd explains the existence of Junior League in this area actually goes back 40 years, but since it takes 10 years to become a legitimized local chapter, the official start date is 1963.

"Since our inception," Hurd says, "over 150 different local charities have benefited from our League, either through grants or our members volunteering their time at the charities."

Hurd points to Junior League's founding of the Family Resource Center and the Salinas Adult Day Care Center for Alzheimer's patients as accomplishments of particular note. Many other significant projects are in the works, she adds.

"Top Hats and Pearls" begins with cocktails and silent auction at 6 p.m. Dinner, a liver auction and dancing round out the evening of entertainment.

Additional information and reservations can be obtained by calling Hurd at 626-1065. Tickets are $50 per person.

Foster care families needed

The Office of Community and Children's Services needs homes willing to share their families with children who need an alternative home—whether it be for six months or the whole year - while family reunification services are offered, or eventually a permanent home. Almost every currently licensed foster home is filled, the office reports. For information about fostering or adopting a child, call 899-8061 or 755-4660.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are needed to deliver 250 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 280 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 25 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually a sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to prepare meals at the Meals on Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The agency also serves lunch to about 75 seniors at the facility every day. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Louis "Studs" Terkel, born in New York in 1912, was 8 when his family moved to Chicago. Their neighborhoods near museums and theaters, and Terkel was fascinated by Chicago lore. He earned a law degree, but chose to act in soap operas, become a radio disc jockey and then an accomplished interviewer and writer. His fame spread as he produced unusual books, like "Hard Times" (the Depression) and "The Good War" (World War II), each told in words of ordinary people. One of his pet subjects: Elderly people who energize their communities.

Do people need more vitamins and minerals to stay healthy as the age? No, says the National Institute on Aging: "Although certain requirements, such as for 'sunshine' vitamin D, may increase slightly with age, older people need the same amounts of most vitamins and minerals as younger people," Says NIA: Eat nutritious foods and cut down on sweets, salty snack foods, high-calorie drinks and alcohol.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

A prayer for all

MARY, QUEEN of Scots, composed the following prayer while she was held prisoner and even if you have heard it many times before, it bears repeating since it suffers repetition happily and is an excellent Petition for this Eastertide.

Mary Stuart's Prayer

Keep us, O God, from all pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault finding and leave off all self seeking. May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face without self pity and without prejudice.

May we never be hasty in judgment and always generous.

Let us take time for all things, and make us to grow calm, serene, and gentle.

Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straight forward and unafraid.

Grant that we may realize that it is the little things of life that create differences, that in the big things of life, we are as one.

Booklet answers questions on addictive behavior

The Community Hospital Recovery Center is offering a booklet titled, "20 Common Questions, And Some Uncommon Answers About Addictive Behavior (And What You Can do to Help)."

The booklet is free for anyone who contacts the center at 800-528-8080. Callers wishing to remain anonymous will be told where to find a copy of the booklet.

Carmel jazz bash benefits student musicians

Kitty Margolis

Madeline Eastman

By JOHN DETRO

THE CAUSE behind it would be enough to sell the show scheduled for Wednesday evening, March 3, at Sunset Center.

But ticket-buyers will get more than just enough, hearing two of this nation's finest jazz vocalists along with their all-star backup trio and sets by Carmel High student musicians.

San Francisco-based singers Kitty Margolis and Madeline Eastman will be supported by the brilliant Dick Hindman on piano, Vince Lateano (drums), Scott Steed (bass).

First will come — after the night's initial downbeat at 7:30 — Carmel High School Jazz Ensemble and Carmel Marching and Chowder Society Band.

Tickets cost $12 (advance) or $15 at the door. Should you wish to buy beforehand, they're on sale at Do Re Mi Music in Carmel Plaza and The Barnyard, and Monterey's Recycled Records.

All proceeds will go to the Carmel Unified District Music Boosters and Sunset Center Task Force.

Producing with the Boosters is Carmel real estate broker Paul Brocchini and other Carmel Mission Kiwanis Club members. A true jazz buff, Brocchini said this week: "We hope it can become an annual event."

School music has suffered terribly in recent years due to fund shortages. In 1987, Dick Robins was hired as Carmel High music director. His mission: rebuild.

"Right now," says Dick, "15 percent of the studentbody participates in school music programs — Concert Band, Pep Band, Jazz Ensemble, Dixieland (Chowder Society) Band, Blues Band, Strings, Choir. Similar efforts are in effect at middle and lower schools."

Kitty and Madeline both deserve the critic-type raves they have collected via live dates and recording sessions. Close friends and extremely witty women, they enjoy working together occasionally. And when they do, audiences get a rare treat.

Eastman's hornlike phrasing and intelligent delivery complement her great taste in material. Margolis has the rich kind of voice — think 1940s Anita O'Day plus Betty Carter — that's fun to hear. And musicians respect her harmonic knowhow.

Both women have knocked out Monterey Jazz Festival crowds more than once. Both have played major clubs on both coasts.

Hindman, Lateano and Steed all are Monterey Jazz Fest favorites. Among their lengthy credits: Vince was with Woody Herman and Cal Tjader, Dick Hindman with Richie Cole, Scott with Mark Murphy.

Star turn due at Cherry Hall

BROADWAY AND award-winning film actress Karen Black will give a single performance at Carmel's Cherry Hall.

The curtain will rise on her one-woman show — A View of the Heart — at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 26.

Directed by Robin McKee, who left Los Angeles and found her present home in Carmel, the play was conceived and written by Black.

"This material," says Robert Reese of Cherry Center, "paints a wide swath of human experience through song, monologue, character portraits. She has done it to critical acclaim in Los Angeles, Toronto and throughout the southern United States."

And: "It's through Robin that Karen Black agreed to come here. Robin and I were kicking around ideas for (the) Cherry (facility) and she mentioned her friendship with Karen. The next thing I knew, we were putting this benefit for the Center on our calendar."

Tickets cost $30 apiece. Reservations must be made in advance by calling 624-7491. A reception with the star will follow her stage presentation.

Reese says A View of the Heart combines 14 songs — from folk classics to contemporary — "which ricochet between sentimental recollections and wildly funny observations of the human condition. Karen Black's own sensibility comes forth with rich humor, insight, truth. During the 75 minutes, she slips seamlessly into an assortment of characters: from the weary cleaning lady backstage to the optimistic torch singer."

Accompanying her will be local musicians Dave Clay (piano) and Nick Williams (reeds).

Black won Golden Globe awards for her screen roles in Five Easy Pieces (Best Supporting Actress) and The Great Gatsby (Best Supporting Actress). She received an Academy Award nomination (Best Supporting Actress) for Five Easy Pieces with Jack Nicholson.

She has many other major screen cred-

Leisure Notebook: Mystery writer pledges Carmel appearance

HER FIRST mystery novel was published in 1988. Now, Elizabeth George is being favorably compared to P.D. James and even to the creator of Lord Peter Whimsey — Dorothy L. Sayers.

George has a particularly avid following at Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library, according to Harrison spokesperson Arlene Hess. And that's where Elizabeth will appear on her birth anniversary, Friday, Feb. 26.

The writer will speak at 8 p.m. as part of the Authors-by-the-Sea series. She's donating her time; all proceeds from ticket sales will go into the library's book purchase fund.

Ducats cost $12 apiece and are available at the library circulation desk. There will be no reserve seating.

THE PARSONS Green Band and Cowboy Storyteller Mike Beck will appear at 9:15 p.m. Friday, Feb. 26, at Sunset Center in a benefit for programs supported by Carmel Police Officers Association.

CPOA spokespersons note that proceeds from tickets ($12.50 each) will aid Drug Abuse Resistance Education in the schools, Seniors Helping Seniors and Carmel Youth Center.

The band plays Bluegrass, Folk, Cajun, Country Rock. Members: Gene Parsons (former Byrds guitarist), Meridan Green, John Bush, Mona Gnader, Vic Carberry.

ADMIRERS OF the late Nobel author John Steinbeck will gather at Cannery Row on Saturday, Feb. 27, to celebrate what would have been his 91st birth anniversary.

The occasion will be noted by Cannery Row Association History Committee with a special program that's public and free of charge.

The fun will begin at 7 p.m. in Monterey Bay Aquarium Auditorium. Since seating is limited, the doors will close at 7:15. Then:

• Monterey Mayor Dan Albert will declare Feb. 27 as John Steinbeck Day.

• Excerpts from East of Eden and Of Mice and Men will be presented in a theatrical manner along with Steinbeck's ecological writing.

• Readings will be done by Steinbeck daughter-in-law Nancy Steinbeck and Susan Schillinglaw, director for San Jose State University Steinbeck Research Center.

• David Baumgarten and Larry Hosford will add original songs about Cannery Row.

The party will continue at 9 p.m. at the American Tin Cannery Building with music, belly dancing, magicians, a sketch artist. Hors d'oeuvres and beverages will be served.

Steinbeck will be honored on Cannery Row from March 1-25 during weekdays. Steinbeck Month is sponsored by the Cannery Row Marketing Council.

Wednesdays, for example, will be History Day featuring interactive lectures on Steinbeck and the Monterey Peninsula's place in his life and work. Actor Taelen Thomas will perform as John, circa 1934.

Thursdays will be Wine Day with Monterey County winemaker dinners and wine cookery seminars.

No-cost walking tours of Cannery Row will be available Monday through Thursday at 10 a.m.

Mayflower concert fills all seats

By LYN BRONSON

LAST SATURDAY evening at the Mayflower Presbyterian Church in Pacific Grove, the Monterey County Symphony presented the second concert in its new ensemble music series known as Music at the Mayflower.

Not only did this sponsorship by the County Symphony generate such an excellent promotional campaign that its first concert last Christmas enjoyed a house with standing room only, but it is a pleasure to report that the second concert last Saturday evening was sold out too.

This second concert featured the Monterey County Symphony Chorus directed by Ken Ahrens in a program of American music, including works by Randall Thompson, Aaron Copland, Charles Ives, Leonard Bernstein — and the premiere of a new work by Monterey Peninsula composer Annette LaSiege.

The chorus of approximately 40 singers had originally been assembled for the Monterey County Symphony's performance in 1991 of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Now the chorus has become a permanent part of the Symphony's seasonal concert activities.

Thompson first

The program began with Randall Thompson's Frostiana, seven songs based on poems by Robert Frost, which were read on this occasion with subtle humor by Henry Littlefield.

Most familiar of the poems is Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening, which in the beautiful setting by Thompson evoked a lovely mood. Also noteworthy was the beautiful sylvan bird song in the piano part of Come In and the very effective setting of The Telephone.

These seven songs by Randall Thompson slowly built to a splendid cumulative effect evoking the nostalgic feeling of a earlier and simpler time.

Suite of three

Annette LaSiege's amusing suite of three songs, entitled Book Lice, Fireflies and Water Striders, read with gusto by Henry and Madeline Littlefield, is based on poems from A Joyful Noise by Paul Fleischman of Pacific Grove.

The chorus performed these three whimsical songs with a wry wit perfectly suited to their settings.

Ken Ahrens then moved from the podium to the organ console and delivered a large-scaled, solid performance of Charles Ives' youthful Variations on America, which combines the conservative setting of the famous song with Ives' tongue-in-cheek manipulation of the melody, including his familiar technique of composing in two different keys simultaneously.

Traditional songs

Another bit a Americana followed with a suite of five traditional American songs adapted for chorus by Aaron Copland. Except for Shall We Gather by the River, the remaining four songs were less familiar, but the settings by Copland worked well, and one of the songs — Ching-A-Ring-Chaw — deserves to be heard more often.

The closing work was a series of songs from Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story: Tonight, I Feel Pretty, One Hand-One Heart, Maria and America. It was the perfect way to end the program.

A special mention should be made of the assisting pianist, Eleanor Avila, whose sparkling accompaniments were always precise and tasteful. Her participation added a lot to the effectiveness of the ensemble.

Many high-quality hats

You have to admire the professionalism of Ken Ahrens for his successful, multi-faceted career on the Monterey Peninsula. For many years he was Chairman of the Music Department at Santa Catalina School in Monterey, and for 28 years he has been one of the principal members of the staff of the Carmel Bach Festival.

More recently, in addition to his duties on the Bach Festival Staff (which includes expertise in sophisticated computer applications), he has assumed the directorship of the Bach Festival Chorus. And we learn from the printed program that he is also organist at Sunnyvale Presbyterian Church.

Just to do all the many things he does is admirable enough, but to observe how well and easily he does them is impressive indeed.

The next concert in the Music at the Mayflower series will be for piano and strings, featuring pianist John O'Connor on March 18.

Art Roundup: Disney animation gets major show locally

AN EXHIBITION of Walt Disney animation art featuring images from his most acclaimed feature films and shorts will be open to the public for two weeks beginning March 13 at The Gibson Gallery of Animated Art (formerly Reid Gallery) in The Barnyard, it was announced Tuesday.

All that being so, please note that a cel is a colorful painting on a transparent sheet of celluloid, representing 1/24th second of film.

Nearly 50 limited-edition cels from Disney films released over the past six decades will be on view at The Gibson, providing a unique retrospective of that animation artwork in one collection.

"Here's a rare opportunity to see how animation art evolved from the early days of the Disney Studios," says gallery owner Johanna Gibson, "from the Mickey Mouse shorts to more recent films such as Aladdin. It's a breathtaking collection that will appeal to people of all ages."

Depending on the technique used, limited-edition cel art retails from $700 up to $5,000. The Gibson Gallery also offers serigraph cels — or sericels — which recreate images of Disney's famed characters. These generally are produced in editions of 2,500 and have a suggested retail cost of $250 (matted and framed).

The Gibson Gallery — open from 10 a.m. till 6 p.m. every day — is next to Thunderbird Bookstore.

VISITORS TO the newest exhibit at Henry Meade Williams Local History Room will find out what connection Hugh Comstock, designer and builder of Carmel's legendary cottages, had with cartoonist Jimmy Hatlo. (Hatlo created the Little Iodine comic strip.)

That Local History Room serves as archive and museum for Carmel. It's at the corner of Sixth and Mission within Harrison Library's Park Branch.

On view through the end of May, the exhibit is entitled Carmel Would Never Have Been the Same. Featured are Mayotta Browne Comstock's Otsy-Totsy Dolls, photographs of the young Hugh and Mayotta, Comstock cottage replicas made by former Carmel Mayor Barney Laiolo.

The exhibit is made possible in part by a grant from the Frank and Eva Buck Foundation. This grant was facilitated by Robert and Lacy Williams Buck of Carmel.

QUITE A fascinating title: Cowboy Portraits and Landscapes from Canada to Mexico.

Read on. . . .

This photographic exhibit by much-appreciated artist Jay Dusard will be on view at the Center for Photographic Art in Carmel's Sunset Complex. The dates are Feb. 26-April 9.

A public reception for Dusard will be held from 6:30-8:00 p.m. on Friday, March 5, in the Center Gallery.

And a post-reception concert by Western folk group Horse Sense will spotlight some of Jay's friends — cowboy poet Paul Zarzyski and musicians Justin Bishop and Richard Lawrence — at 8:00 p.m. in Sunset Theater. Tickets may be obtained at the Sunset Box Office.

Dusard was 23 "before he saw the West and became a working cowboy," says Diane Hanek of the Center for Photographic Art. "Taking up photography, he soon traded his chaps for lens caps."

He studied with Frederick Sommer and Ansel Adams, eventually teaching at Prescott College in Arizona. Dusard has been creating black and phite photos with large-format cameras since 1965 and has won wide respect for cowboy portraits, landscapes, abstractions.

"His images transcend the personal portrait," Diane adds, "and show us symbols and icons of the West. He is considered by his contemporaries as one of the most influential photogtraphers working today."

Dusard will offer a workshop from 10:00 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 6. Call the Center at 625-5181 for the cost and other details.

PACIFIC GROVE Art Center's next opening and reception (for artists, members, friends) will happen from 7-9 p.m. Friday, Feb. 26.

Then these exhibits will continue through April 2:

David Henry Gill Gallery — Dick Crispo's Tribute To A Generation and Claudia Cohen's Conversations With Myself.

Elmarie Dyke Gallery — Jay Campbell. Jay's Joy: Newest Collection.

Louise Cardeiro Boyer Gallery — Bettina Borer. In Color and Light.

Photography Gallery — Richard Pitnick. Cannibal Feast: The Mexico Portfolio.

Crispo calls his mixed media presentation a "lite low-fat show." He's the winner of 31 awards.

Sausalito artist Cohen "combines a sharp wit with a sense of drama in designing her ceramic-based mixed media figurative creations," according to program notes.

Monterey artist Campbell has been painting in California since the late '70s. He's also a noted book illustrator.

Borer hails from Santa Cruz. And: "Her paintings exude playfulness, dancing, activity, airiness, warm light, the joy of radiant color."

Freelance writer and photographer Pitnick teaches photography at Monterey Peninsula College. "His photographs of Mexico attempt to synthesize symbol, myth, history and ritual through the manipulation of scale space and visual context."

Then: "All the photographs are silver gelatin fiber prints, selenium toned. Some are hand painted with transparent photo oils."

Before her move to Carmel Valley, Corser worked as staff photographer for Public Broadcasting in San Diego and exhibited throughout Southern California. She currently has a Carmel studio.

Colburn takes a look at an old pal's work

By SAM COLBURN

THE MONTEREY Peninsula is a very felicitous terrain for artists. We have what has been called "The greatest meeting of land and sea on earth."

Life is harsh and comparatively cruel in our great urban areas. That is why so many artists came here. We had not only the resources of nature, but also a burgeoning fishing industry with a wealth of boats, nets and picturesque fishermen. This was all dandy until we stripped the ocean of its sardines.

In my mind, the artists who were here then comprised the Carmel School of Art. The names that come to mind are Armin Hansen, Paul Dougherty, John O'Shea, William Ritschel, Francis McComas and Willie Watts.

I think this milieu was basically romantic. Coming along, perhaps a little later, was Auguste Francis Gay. I knew him as Gus Gay and he lived a block away from me in Carmel Woods. Many years later, Nancy Boas came to my house to talk to me about him as she was writing a book about the Society of Six. Gus was a member of this group as was Louis Siegrist, with whom I had worked in the camouflage department of the U.S. Engineers in San Francisco during World War II.

Gay exhibit

The title of his show at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is Wonderful Colors. Gus did have a range of palette which he used so effectively.

At the entrance to this show, which is hung in the Frank Work Gallery, there is his Self Portrait with him wearing a big black beret. Painted with very light colors is Woman in Garden, a very impressionistic piece. Untitled is a cabin in trees which develops as you move away — a synthesis not easy to achieve. Our beloved S.C. Yuan could paint that way.

As many works in this show are untitled, I shall refer to them by their subject matter. One is of small boats at anchor in Monterey Bay. The blue of the water establishes a serenity.

There are several paintings of boats and the men that worked them — Fishermen Mending Nets, and Fishermen Stretching Nets. Gus was very absorbed by our circle of enchantment. His Hatton Ranch is warm and perhaps reminiscent of Armin Hansen and E. Charlton Fortune.

I, myself, painted at least 25 of this beloved group before it fell before the bulldozers of development. Another favorite subject was the Berta Ranch. The barn in this piece was the birthplace of Monterey Jack cheese.

His use of space with blocked-out areas developed form. Look to his Old Adobes and A View of Monterey from the rooftops of Stevenson House. Look to the essay on him in Nancy Boas's The Society of Six..

YOUTH MUSIC Monterey announces that its Honors Orchestra will appear in a joint concert with Monterey County Symphony at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 7, at Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Center.

The collaboration occurs annually and the public will be welcomed without cost.

The program will open with Jacques Offenbach's popular Overture to his comic opera Orpheus in the Underworld.

Granados' Intermezzo from Goyescas also will be rendered — along with Mussorgsky's Night on Bald Mountain.

Maestro Clark Suttle, County Symphony music director and conductor, chose Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 in C Major as the final work for the combined orchestras.

In preparation for the March 7 event, Suttle has served as guest conductor of the Honors Orchestra. This represents the most accomplished young musicians in the county and has 37 players from various communities.

String sectional rehearsals were led by Mary Lou Galen, San Jose Symphony concertmistress. Leading the woodwind and brass sectional rehearsals was John Anderson, music instructor at Monterey Peninsula College.

The Honors Orchestra rehearses weekly from September to May. Participation is open to "any motivated young musician by audition."

MONTEREY OPERA this week made known dates for its next production — Kurt Weill's Threepenny Opera.

Also, there will be a special preview followed by a "meet the cast reception" at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 18.

Stephen Tosh will conduct. Stage director: Gina Welch-Hagen. Monterey Opera sets the work in 1992 in "Any City, U.S.A. The characters swirling through the plot are colorful, rich in satire."

Tickets are now on sale at Do Re Mi Music in Carmel Plaza and The Barnyard. Costs: $22 (general); $18 (students and seniors).

Gay Men's Chorus presents an inspirational evening

By MATTHEW FRIDAY

THE SAN FRANCISCO Gay Men's Chorus brought out a crowd of nearly 600 to Carmel's Sunset Center on Saturday in conjunction with AIDS Awareness Week in Monterey County.

Introduced by Assembly representative Sam Farr, the 50-plus member chorus streamed onto the stage with the audience's steadily rising and enthusiastic applause.

Bright voice

Farr had mentioned the terrible toll HIV/AIDS has had on talent in this (and any other) community, a point tragically taken in the example of this choral group — which has lost 110 of its own members to AIDS-related illnesses since its inception 15 years ago. (That counts this group not only as a survivor in its own right, but the bright voice that brings the very heart of hurt, praise, good humor and hope to anyone affected by HIV/AIDS: by now, all of us.)

From the opening number the miracles of appreciation, celebration and forgiveness shone and the audience was captivated. A powerful group (ranging four volumes according to a musically astute associate, where three volumes are typical of a good amateur choir and five to the best professionals), they provided excellent blendings, chest-thrumming bass, restrained tenors and lilting harmonies through a 90-minute program.

Among the many pieces performed: Bernstein (the hauntingly lyrical Dream with Me as well as Somewhere and Quintet from West Side Story); New York, New York — jazzed up, hot; the Father's Lullaby (which brought down the house — tender, liberating and altogether affirmative of individuality as well as life processes, gifts and choices), and Mozart's first of the Masonic Cantatas — elegantly layered, heroic and churchly (of the grand old design), the phrases bitten off and precise.

Surprises

Surprise champions included a Nigerian Christmas carol in the Aruban dialect, filling the stage with vigor, movement and maturity, a joyful ripeness and the sudden sense of that continent's vistas; and Holly Near's Great Peace March, a gentle candlelit passage through history among friends, one moment a quiet starlit night and the next alive with vibrant passion for the universality of mankind, its pains and deeply embedded, spiritual goals.

The San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus is one of 127 internationally recognized gay and lesbian choirs, and its performance here was a genuine coup for area co-sponsors — The Monterey County Lesbian/Gay/Bisexual Task Force, The Gay Men's Health Coalition and Carmel-by-the-Sea (through Sunset Center).

The multiracial composition of these chorals (this one includes an ASL interpreter and numbers fathers, brothers, uncles and sons in the richness of male depth, charm, and support across a wide age range), are reminiscent of a church choral, but made poignant now in its immediacy of celebration and sacrifice.

Comfortable, accessible, and unpretentious, each of the performers, as everyone in the audience, proudly displayed this decade's badge of compassion, courage and conviction — the pinned red ribbon, a bright flair of self-assurance, perseverance and humility.

Best summed up by the conductor in a quote from Holly Near's contribution, "We will have peace because we must, we must because we cherish life," the Chorus continues to have a profound impact on its listeners everywhere.

And that's the truth.

Dixie talent

THE MUSICAL lineup has been announced for the 13th annual Dixieland Monterey. It all will happen March 5-6-7 at selected cabaret locations — "within walking distance of each other" in the downtown and wharf area.

Bands listed by official fest spokespersons now include: Abalone Stompers (Monterey), Blue Street (Fresno), Fullertown Strutters (Fullerton), High Sierra (Three Rivers), Igor's Jazz Cowboys (Arizona), Janet Carroll and the Hollywood Jazz Cats (Los Angeles), Jean Kittrell and The Rivermen (Missouri), Natural Gas (San Francisco), Night Blooming Jazzmen (Claremont).

Mike Vax's Great American (Antioch), Pat Yankee's Gentlemen of Jazz (San Francisco), Professor Plum (Los Gatos), River City Stomperz (Sacramento), Sorta Dixie (Las Vegas), South Frisco (San Diego), 20th Century (Los Angeles), Warehouse Reunion Band (Monterey), Turk Murphy (San Francisco).

If you're a true blue trad jazz buff, that bright roster speaks for itself. To find out prices and order badges, call the Dixieland Hotline at 443-5260.

More on all this next time. Some of the cabaret locations are non-smoking rooms only.

(The Carmel High School Marching and Chowder Society Jazz Band again will play the fest — at 9 p.m. Friday and 6 p.m. Saturday at Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum. The students will march in the Saturday morning parade too.)

The Reel Stuff: Cemetery Club serves ethnic morsels

By PAUL WOLF

REMEMBER THE first time you heard the name Olympia Dukakis?

Most likely, she was accepting an Oscar for her supporting role in Moonstruck — about the same time her better-known cousin was entering the race for president

In a way, that 1987 film was a precursor to The Cemetery Club (now showing at the Carmel Village Theater). The former, starring both Dukakis and Danny Aiello, was an endearing look at an Italian-American microcosm, just as this one peeks at a Jewish subculture.

Awarded ★★

Throw in 1988's Crossing Delancy — which fondly observes Jewish manners and morals — and you have a bona fide genre. If you like, call it "ethnic comedy-realism."

Such movies have an automatic appeal. Unfortunately, the Cemetery Club, directed by Bill Duke, is a dreary representative.

The story line is simple. Widows Doris, Esther and Lucile — sympathetically realized by Dukakis, Ellen Burstyn and Diane Ladd — discover they have some growing to do when a widower named Ben, the Aiello character, shakes up their permanent mourning.

The movie seems determined to show us that Ben's courtship of Esther is evidence that, given proper time and healing, "love will find a way."

After a bit of thought, one is more likely to jump to more cynical conclusions: the pretty one inevitably gets the attention, and single men over 50 make for slim pickings.

Giving credit

No doubt, these kinds of movies deserve credit for dealing with ordinary, unglamorous people. They offer a mixture of humor, romance and gentle life lessons; The Cemetery Club has a bit of all but too little of any.

To begin with, if a cemetery has few avenues for humor, Ivan Menchell's screenplay takes many wrong turns. So there are few genuine laughs, many forced ones.

"Read any good books lately?" the Dukakis character asks her husband Abe's tombstone.

"This is nice, like we were married. But at least I know where you are every night."

Sometimes we are dished out ethnic morsels as though we should be satisfied on them alone. About as funny as this gets is when, at a party, Lucile notices an attractive man in her midst — only to be told he is the rabbi. So what we really get is a lot of talk with plenty of bagels and knishes nearby.

And then there's the drama, but it justs plods along.

The film's most intriguing question, actually, is whether Ben's charming or simply available. He does become catalyst for the film's major message. These women learn that letting go is the first step to forming new attachments.

The little lessons along the way could have made the journey worthwhile if they were either funnier or more gripping. Yes, dating is trying at any age. Okay, we do get jealous when close friend find romance and we are alone.

Comedy requires invention; drama is sustained by surprise. It is not enough for a movie to have characters who seem as real as the people who live down the street.

Book Bag

By John Detro

Paul's respectful art

PACIFIC GROVE'S Paul Fleischman has a good reputation in the book trade. He's known far and wide as a writer of strong, imaginative stories for children and young adults.

His work history includes major awards, the 1989 Newbery Medal won by Joyful Noise: Poems for Two Voices. And The Borning Room was named a 1991 Golden Kite Award Honor Book. And Graven Images: Three Stories became a 1983 Newbery Honor Book.

Quite naturally, fans were excited about the appearance of a brand new Fleischman title — Bull Run from HarperCollins Children's Books. This 102-page selection shows off handsome woodcuts by David Frampton and costs $14 in hardcover. The recommendation: Ages 10 and up.

Paul will sign copies of Bull Run from 1-3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 28, at Mulberry Bookshop for Children. Also a gallery, the outlet is located at 169 Fountain Ave. in Pacific Grove.

Accuracy, scrubbed style

Fleischman approaches the Civil War's first great battle with a historian's accuracy, the prose poet's clear eye and scrubbed style, utter respect for his youthful readership. A number of voices comment (eight Southern characters and eight Northern); boys and girls will absorb how different observers focus on a single event in widely and colorfully varied ways.

It's obvious that this writer loves the subject and the people who here splash us with light and meaty details. He's so caring and well-grounded that every speaker rings true.

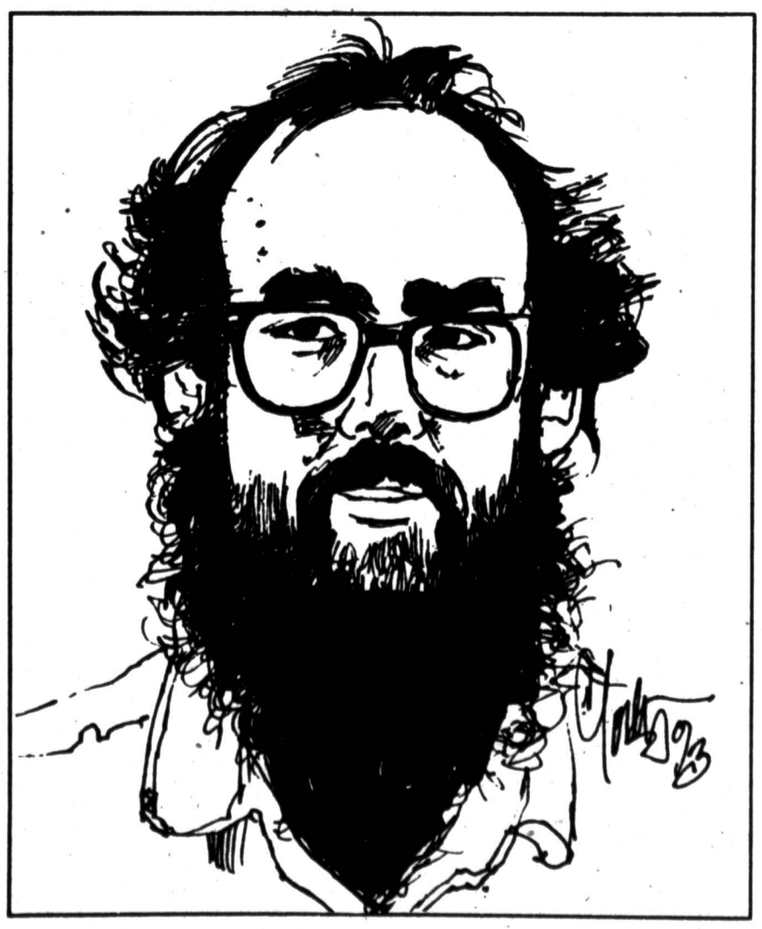
As a sucker for regional and/or antique vernacular, I enjoyed the words of soldier Virgil Peavey: "We joined General Bee's brigade, but all the talk was of General Jackson. 'Old Lemon-Squeezer' the men called him. He was forever sucking on half a lemon. His peculiar ways went a long chalk past that."

Gideon Adams tells raw fact: "To be a (pale) Negro living in the midst of whites, unknown to them, is to be a ghost spying on the living. Oftentimes I felt I must have joined the Southern army by mistake. The soldiers mercilessly abused a stuttering black cook in our company and tormented the collie dog he'd brought with him."

Shem Suggs: "We rode off after the Northerners and took prisoners by the hundred. Some said we should march upon Washington, but our troops were dead-weary and dog-hungry. Winning had left us nearly whipped ourselves. I looked over the field. Dead horses were scattered about everywhere. Worse than them were the ones that were wounded, charging about without any rider, blood running down out of their nostrils."

Carlotta King: "I was jump-stomached all day, wonderin' who was winnin'. Past noon a soldier came wanderin' our way. He'd been shot through the ear and held a kerchief up against it, drippin' blood. I'd washed out all the master's clothes and was sittin' with the other slaves. He told us the Southern men were licked. I could hardly keep from yellin' for joy."

There are no evil spokespersons in the book — simply folks caught up by the terrible pull and broil of war.



Portrait of Paul Fleischman by Carey Crockett.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE of FREDERICK F. FISHER

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FREDERICK F. FISHER.

A PETITION has been filed by Marguerite D. Fisher in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey.

THE PETITION requests that Marguerite D. Fisher be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held March 26, 1993 at 9:30 a.m. in Probate Dept.: located at 240 Church St., Salinas, Ca.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

REAL ESTATE Viewpoint

by John Saar, Broker

Are Your Buyers Unreasonable?

You and the buyers for your home have had a meeting of the minds, and you thought your agreements were reflected in the paperwork both parties signed. Then it seemed like the buyers got a little crazy, making unreasonable demands over and above what you agreed to in the contract.

It's important to remember that people are rarely at their best when they're buying a house. They may be suffering from "Buyers Remorse," that intense feeling that they've paid too much and as soon as they own your house it's going to fall down. They may start nitpicking the results of their structural inspection, or they may come back and ask you to pay more points or convey your youngest child along with the house. While most buyers are wonderful to do business with, a few are not. If your buyers get crazy, don't take it personally. An important part of an agent's job is to do whatever handholding it takes to get them happily settled into your home.

FINANCIALLY ORIENTED software packages are a cinch at Monterey Bay Computer Works with the help of experienced and knowledgeable staffers like Chris Newman and Errol Chambliss.*

Computer Works puts computers to work in the financial world

MONTEREY BAY Computer Works, located in both Seaside and Salinas, has firm links to the financial world.

The outpost specializes in IBM compatible and Apple Macintosh computers.

"Lots of financial companies use these in daily activities," says Marketing Director Errol Chambless. "We also offer a wide variety of financially oriented software packages — the Lotus 1-2-3 premiere spread sheet program and Microsoft Excel, for example, and popular accounting systems like Real World and Peachtree."

A hot program during tax time is Turbo Tax. Also very popular is Quicken, the personal finance software package that aims at automating your checkbook and allows you to budget and categorize expenditures.

Chambless also recommends Andrew Tobias' Managing Your Money. This software offers more than checkbook management: it also incorporates investment and stocks analysis and financial planning.

Monterey Bay Computer Works is located at 1721 Fremont St., Seaside (call 899-3177) and 1668 N. Main St. in Harden Ranch Plaza, Salinas (call 442-8800). Both stores are open daily.

The 17-member technical crew guarantees "the best possible attention" when customers require help with equipment evaluation and repairs.

Monterey Bay Computer Works stands tall on its reputation. "We're the largest computer retailer in Monterey County," Chambless says, "that carries nothing but computers. This's all we do. So people know they're getting the best attention. We offer a large selection for discount prices, and we're experts who use computers on a hobby basis."

Inns by the Sea staff actively pursues role as leaders in community

INNS BY the Sea has been providing hospitality to the visitors to Carmel-by-the-Sea for the past 17 years. With their five inns here and two more in Monterey, they are able to provide accommodations for all tastes and needs and for all rate ranges.

Tom Reiser started the business with Wayside Inn at Seventh and Mission. He had been thinking about acquiring an apartment house in this area when someone suggested, "Why not an inn? It's the same idea except you have new tenants more often." The original section of the inn actually was apartments at one time, and is now 10 mini-suites with fireplaces in the living rooms and some of them have full kitchens. These are excellent accommodations for families or for extended visits. Reiser discovered he enjoyed the hospitality business. As the years went by, he added more properties (and deleted a few). Carriage House Inn, the "newest" inn in town, is now 15 years old and has had the distinguished honor of a Four-Diamond AAA rating every year since it was built.

The computer age came to Inns by the Sea in 1990. They have a very sophisticated reservation system which was designed by Nancy Lorenz, a member of their own staff. In addition she has created their guest check-in program, auditing reports, housekeeping scheduling and more. Reiser, who is a self-proclaimed "computer nerd" keeps takes on all facets of the business on a daily basis via their computer network. He and his wife, Tracy, travel throughout the world and are ever watchful for ideas and do's and don't's which they relay back to the staff.

In 1986 Reiser decided to relinquish some of the hands-on management of the company and brought in Gary Luce as the general manager. Luce comes from Lake Tahoe where he had been director of hotel operations at Harvey's, and prior to that, hotel manager at Harrahs. He has been promoted to president of Inns by the Sea and has also become very active in the community, serving as president of the Carmel Business Association for two terms, and currently is on the board of directors of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

The innkeepers and staff at all seven of the inns enjoy making their guests feel welcome and consider it their privilege to perform the little extras that make a guest's visit memorable. All innkeepers, desk clerks and reservationists have attended seminars on customer service and "Selling from the Heart," which have been produced by Buchholz and Rosenzweig, a local firm. Refresher courses are given on an ongoing basis. The support staff for the inns—accounting, reservations, housekeeping and maintenance—operates as a team, effectively managing the seven individual inns as efficiently as one large property.

Customer service is the No. 1 priority for the inns. This philosophy begins at the top with president, Gary Luce, who has been seen making beds and running a vacuum cleaner when the need arises. Every room is inspected before a new guest checks in with an eye for the small details that can affect the comfort and enjoyment of that person's visit.

To ensure guest satisfaction, Inns by the Sea conducts focus groups where they invite past guests to meet with an outside agency for the purpose of reviewing the quality of the accommodations and service. Changes have been initiated as a result of these focus groups.

A concierge number has recently been added. Guests may call ahead on the toll-free phone number to make arrangements for dinner reservations, theater tickets, flowers, balloons or special needs such as an extra dresser, a board under the mattress, etc.

If you have friends coming to the area or a business acquaintance needing a place to stay, Inns by the Sea has a toll-free reservation number. It is possible to get rates and availability for all of the inns with just one call. The reservationists will spend the time necessary to help the caller locate the most suitable accommodations.

In Carmel they have Carriage House Inn, Candle Light Inn, Dolphin Inn, Svendsgaards Inn and Wayside Inn; and in Monterey, Cypress Gardens Inn and El Adobe Inn. For more information, call 624-0101 or (800) 433-4732.

Pay a revitalizing visit to El Salto by the Sea

REVITALIZE your body and renew your spirit at El Salto by the Sea, a resort that blends the very best of yesterday and today.

Only three owners have possessed this exquisite ocean-front property in Capitola for the past 110 years. Elizabeth Blodgett has operated El Salto by the Sea for 40 years, and she has filled the grounds and cottages with flowers and lovingly selected furnishings.

El Salto, which entertained celebrities during the '20s and '30s, has taken on a new dimension with its spa program. Under Elizabeth's tutelage, from Sunday through Thursday the resort offers a program of nutritious spa cuisine, exercise classes, health seminars and beauty services.

Renew yourself with this spa program, set amid four unspoiled ocean-front, wooded acres, in view of truly spectacular sunsets. Your cuisine will be healthy and appealing, the classes stimulating, the whole experience energizing.

The price is $139 and up per person per day for a double room, or $159 per person per day for private room. This includes meals, classes and lodging. Beauty services such as massage, manicure and hair styling are billed separately. And remember that El Salto by the Sea offers accommodations that range from Victorian guestrooms to spacious, deluxe ocean-view apartments.

Escape to Capitola and renew at El Salto by the Sea.

THE NEW showroom at Butcher Block and Bar Stools highlights the contemporary and traditional stylings in furniture for home and business.

Butcher Block and Bar Stools: resource for home, office furniture

THERE'S MORE to the store than its name implies.

Butcher Block and Bar Stools just opened at a new, much larger location: 842 Lighthouse Ave., Monterey. And despite the title, there is much here to help the business owner.

More than 7,000-square-feet of showroom space displays quality wood furniture for office or home, from entertainment centers and sofas to computer desks.

"We operate a very comfortable, no pressure environment," explains Mike Poppleton, president. "Many of the things in here are handmade. And the staff is very knowledgeable."

Solid wood, be it oak, pine or maple, is the specialty of Butcher Block and Bar Stools.

Complement your home environment with oak office furniture available in a golden or darker oak finish. There is a large selection of such items, including bookcases, filing cabinets, traditional rolltop desks and even rolltops that accommodate computers.

Stylings include both contemporary and traditional.

"We deliver and set up," Poppleton notes. "We have one line, Creative Ideas, that offers people a lot of options: locking file drawers, for example."

The store showcases furniture that is solid wood, not merely veneers. And the financing and layaway terms are exceptionally helpful.

Butcher Block and Bar Stools is open 10 to 6 Monday through Saturday, noon to 5 Sunday. Call 649-3083. Oh — and the store does also sell the items in its name.

Monterey County Bank: Committed to small business

By CHARLES T. CHRIETZBERG, JR.
Chairman and CEO
Monterey County Bank

WHEN IT comes to small business financing, Monterey County Bank is in the forefront. In 1992, we were the No. 1 Small Business Administration (SBA) lender in Monterey County for the second year in a row.

CHARLES T. CHRIETZBERG, JR.

Our SBA lending program continues to increase, the financing needs of small businesses continue to increase and Monterey County Bank will continue to be your primary source for small business loans. As acknowledged experts in government guaranteed small business financing, we realize full well that small business is the backbone of America, creating the majority of new jobs. As an SBA Certified Lender, we have made a commitment to continue playing a major role in assisting small businesses in Monterey County in this crucial period with the impending closure of Fort Ord and its effects on our local economy.

Loree Van Bebber, vice president and SBA manager for the bank, has over seven years' experience in SBA financing and will be happy to answer your questions about government guaranteed loans. Remember, our decision-makers are right here and you can meet and discuss your situation with them face-to-face.

We are proud to be the oldest locally owned and managed community bank in Monterey County and we feel this should be a big consideration for you when you're deciding where to go for your banking needs.

Additionally, in 1992 the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation recognized Monterey County Bank with an "Outstanding" rating after evaluating the Bank's Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) performance.

The purpose of the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977, as amended, is to encourage each financial institution to help meet the credit needs of the communities in which it operates.

To qualify for this rating Monterey County Bank "has an outstanding record of, and is a leader in, ascertaining and helping to meet the credit needs of its entire delineated community, including low- and moderate-income neighborhoods, in a manner consistent with its resources and capabilities."

Like the majority of the banking community, 1992 was a banner year for profits. It was, in fact, the second most profitable in our bank's 16-year history.

Showing a net profit of $215,000, second only to $533,000 in 1988, this represents a return on shareholder's equity of 10.7 percent. Total deposits in the bank's Carmel and Monterey branches increased to $29.7 million at Dec. 31, 1992, compared to $26.8 million at Dec. 31, 1991, a 10.8 percent increase.

The bank's asset quality is the best in history and I am optimistic that in 1993 the bank will continue this positive trend.

Our loan delinquency is below 1 percent, while the average for all state banks is over 6 percent. This is a very positive trend and is encouraging for the economy of the Monterey Peninsula.

We are pleased to report that we have a new president and chief lending officer, Milton S. Mosk, Jr. He comes to us very well-qualified from Houston, Texas. He and his family are getting settled in Pacific Grove and he looks forward to the challenges of a new position in a new neighborhood. He is already involved as a member of the Loan Committee of the California Coastal Rural Development Corporation and has been nominated as a member of the Active Corps of Executives for SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives).

Additionally, Bruce Warner has joined us a senior vice president, chief financial officer and chief operating officer. With 20 years in banking he, too, looks forward to "getting involved" and meeting new neighbors.

The bank's continued commitment to community service is very evident. I am continuing in my second term as president of The Economic Development Corporation of Monterey County, Inc., and Pat Miniaci, executive vice president, continues her commitment to Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula. This barely touches the surface of our commitment. All of our officers, directors and staff feel our sense of community by staying involved. The list could go on forever. Suffice it to say that we earned an "Outstanding" rating for CRA by staying involved with our communities.

We look forward to seeing our old friends in 1993, as well as meeting a lot of new ones. Drop by either of our offices when you need help with your small business financing needs, your Golden Poppy Club checking account (still loaded with lots of benefits at no charge if you're 50 or over), or your mortgage financing. Our new, competitive mortgage rates will surprise and delight you.

We wish you a prosperous 1993!

U.S. Supreme Court rules on deductibility of home office expenses

TAKING AN income-tax deduction for home office expenses will be more difficult to justify as a result of a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision. People who perform office tasks at home but who typically provide goods or services to clients or customers elsewhere may no longer qualify for such deductions.

THE SOLIMAN CASE

The Court considered the case of an anesthesiologist who worked in three hospitals 30 to 35 hours a week and used a spare room at home to maintain records, talk to his patients on the telephone, and read medical journals. The doctor deducted $2,500 of expenses and depreciation for his home office. Because the doctor conducted his main professional activities at the hospitals, not at his home office, the high court ruled that his deduction was improper.

Earlier, the Tax Court and a federal appeals court had said that the doctor's home office deduction was permissible because the office was essential to his business, he spent substantial time there, and he had no other office available to him. Accordingly, the courts concluded that the "principal place of business" test contained in the home office deduction rules (see General Rules, below) was met.

In reversing this decision, the Supreme Court said that, in order to determine whether a home office is a taxpayer's principal place of business, two factors should be considered:

- The relative importance of the functions performed at each business location (including the home office) and
- The amount of time spent at the home office and each of the other locations where business is transacted.

In the doctor's case, treatment of patients at the hospitals was clearly more important to his business than the work performed at home. Hence, the home office could not be considered his principal place of business.

The Court noted that, when the comparison of activities performed at each location yields no definite answer (such as when a taxpayer performs income-generating activities at a home office and elsewhere) the "time spent" test will be particularly important.

COURTNEY J. Hanson, James J. Rotter and April M. Green, all Certified Public Accountants, can answer your most difficult tax questions. Call 624-8519.

GENERAL RULES

According to the income-tax law, to qualify for a deduction a home office must be used exclusively on a regular basis as:

1. The principal place of business for any trade or business;
2. A place of business for meeting or dealing with patients, clients or customers in the normal course of business, or
3. In connection with a trade or business if it is a separate structure unattached to the taxpayer's dwelling.

Thus, taxpayers who regularly meet with patients, clients or customers at their home offices will escape the "principal place of business" limitation which ensnared the doctor. So, too, will taxpayers whose home offices are not attached to their homes. Self-employed individuals whose home office is their only place of business should still have no problem qualifying for a deduction.

However, many taxpayers will face the same difficult test the doctor did. Contractors (such as electricians, plumbers and builders) and many types of consultants will likely be among those hardest hit by the new decision.

Individuals who have already taken a home office deduction but who don't qualify as a result of the Soliman decision should consider amending their returns. It is possible that the IRS will seek to disallow deductions for prior years under the Supreme Court ruling. Amending returns prior to hearing from the IRS will stop the accrual of interest on the additional tax due.

If you have questions about the new decision and how it will affect your personal situation, please contact the Carmel offices of Hanson, Rotter and Green, Certified Public Accountants, at 624-8519.

Needs of seniors addressed by Monterey Insurance Agencies

W. SCOTT Bray, Certified Financial Planner, describes his career as that of an "insurance counselor and educator for 'seasoned' citizens."

A peninsula resident since childhood, Bray manages the Long-Term Nursing Home and Home Health Care Insurance Department at Monterey Insurance Agencies.

"My mission is to bridge the gap between individuals and the insurance industry. I am disturbed at the lack of accurate information being given to people. Long Term Care planning is such a critical area for individuals, families and our nation. When people have need for extended care either at home or in a facility, it is often too late to investigate their options and to make an educated decision."

The benefits of planning include assisting people to maintain their independence, to have a choice in where care is given, either at home or in the facility of their choice and helping preserve assets for intended heirs.

"It is an individual choice depending on your needs and objectives."

Bray's interest in the field is a direct result of having his grandmother, a stroke victim, reside in a local nursing home for more than five years.

"I know the tremendous emotional and financial challenges families face. There are many different approaches available today to protect families from unnecessary hardships."

"This is a dynamic and rapidly evolving area of health care. Specific continuing education is required for agents, which I think is good. There is new legislation that makes benefits under an insurance policy more liberal. For instance, most people, providers included, don't know that you can insure for care that is provided informally in the home, even by a relative or friend."

Concerning calls to expand government's role in long-term care financing, Bray says "Given the fiscal realities of our nation's economy, the debt and the deficit, and the competing national priorities for health care dollars, I think it is quite unlikely for government's role to expand anytime soon."

"Insurance costs need not be prohibitive. The ideal is to consult with an adviser who is up-to-date. Plus there are real advantages to doing business with a local agent. You have someone who can sit down with you, explain the coverages and go to bat for you when the need arises."

His company, Monterey Insurance Agencies, is an Independent Insurance Agency, established in 1888. The office is located at 10 Bonifacio Plaza, Monterey.

Bray is available to speak to groups. Phone 373-4925 for more information.

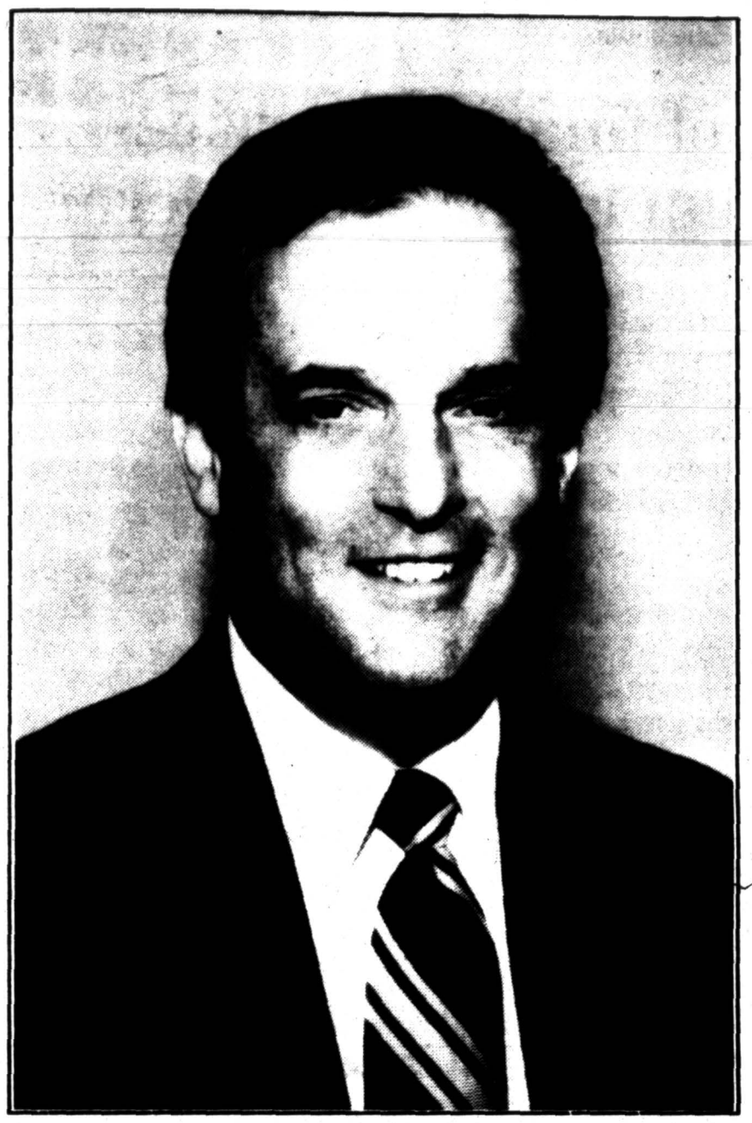
Barney Belleci's agency: A State Farm leader

BARNEY BELLECI is proud to point out that his State Farm Agency, located 23 years on Carmel Rancho Boulevard, still provides the kind of customer service that no 800-number can.

"We're there when people need us. Our clients are not frustrated by recorded messages, pushing the pound sign and the star button," he notes.

His office is a model for the idea that hard work merits results. And once again, this State Farm Agency has earned nationwide recognition.

"Local service is what we have to offer, in terms of personal contact and staff and agent availability," Belleci explains. "Our emphasis is service to our policy holders. In this business, I think the goal is to hold onto the households that you insure. The only way that you can keep their business to give them the good service they expect, in terms of responding to their questions and the need for claims service."



BARNEY BELLECI

The staff includes: Debbie Quinn, office manager; Barbara Rust, customer service representative; Clare McClure, John Cardinale, Shae Lyn Lawler and Marc Bomarito, sales and service representatives; Brenda Starr and Christine Belleci, service representatives.

"In addition, we are very active in the annuity market," Belleci says.

Managing your money: Rely on Pasquinelli Investment Management

MANAGING MONEY is a full-time job.

Sure, most people can do a credible job of investing their own money, says investment manager Ronald Pasquinelli. But that's if they spend the time and effort.

"The fact is, most people don't spend eight to 10 hours a day analyzing markets and evaluating data. It's through no fault of their own. Those who have jobs are on the job. And those who are retired in many cases would rather do other things.

"Or they might not have the specific knowledge," he adds. "After all, most people have never undertaken the formal study of portfolio management. They know in concept that they want to maximize their return while minimizing the risk. But there's probably not Sharp, Markowitz or modern portfolio theory.

"These are the tools modern portfolio managers use in the same way doctors use the x-ray and scalpels, accountants use computers and adding machines and attorneys use their lawbooks."

Pasquinelli, whose firm Pasquinelli Investment Management has been based on the Monterey Peninsula for more than two decades, differentiates between the fee-based investment manager and the commission-based investment broker.

An investment manager is usually independent, is paid a fee based on the size of the portfolio, and receives no compensation for recommending transactions. Investment brokers are usually employed by a stock brokerage company and are paid a commission for each transaction they handle.

"For an investment manager, there is no conflict of interest between what they recommend and what is in the client's interest. An investment manager will still be paid if he recommends a stock that goes up year after year, while an investment broker relying on a commission needs to see that stock turned over many times."

Pasquinelli advises investors to consider four questions before engaging an investment manager:

1. What is their experience? Look at how long they've been in business, if they've been seasoned through the historic fluctuations.

2. Does their experience match what you want done? You don't want your portfolio of liquid assets to provide the learning curve for an investment manager whose total experience has been in real estate development or tax shelters.

3. Is he or she discreet?

4. After you talked with the prospective investment manager, did you feel comfortable? Was the conversation understandable or in jargon. Did he or she understand your goals or did they have their own agenda.

Trust your intuition, says Pasquinelli. "This is your money. It may represent your life savings. Your investment manager can be as vital to your well-being as your doctor. But in both cases, you must have someone you can respect and trust."

The ultimate investment solution for serious investors

THE SELECTION of sound investments is becoming increasingly difficult. Do you lock in rates at present levels or hope for higher rates in the future? How will the new political and economic environment affect your stock portfolio?

Only one thing is guaranteed and that is, the economy will continue to change. To be successful, your portfolio must be able to adapt to the changing economy.

With this in mind, let's create the ideal investment account.

1. We would pay no commission cost.

2. We would have the brightest minds on Wall Street managing our portfolio. As the economy changes our investments would adapt.

3. We would want to eliminate all conflicts of interest;

4. Reduce our risk, and last, not but least;

5. We would want to have superior investment performance.

THE SOLUTION

This ideal style of investing does exist! In the past, "Professional Money Managers" have been the exclusive domain of the wealthy elite or very large pension plans, often with minimum account sizes ranging between $2- and $10 million.

Now, individual investors and smaller pension plans can have access to the best "Professional Money Management Firms" in the nation. The minimum account size is $100,000. The advantages are dramatic:

- Professional management of your assets
- Custom tailoring of your portfolio to meet your specific needs
- Proper diversification and asset allocation
- Superior returns
- In-depth quarterly performance analysis
- No commissions to buy or sell securities.

Whether you're a trustee of a qualified retirement plan or a serious individual investor, this is an investment area you should explore.

For additional information, contact Steve Noble at Prudential Securities, 26515 Carmel Rancho Blvd., Carmel. The telephone number is (408) 625-6890.

TAX PLANNING FOR PEACE OF MIND

Concerned about whether you are paying too much to the government? Are you concerned about how the new tax laws will affect you, your spouse and your estate? Are you concerned about who will advise your spouse in financial matters when you are unable to do so?

There is security in knowing that you are being advised by licensed professionals.

PACIFIC INLAND'S main office is located in Soquel near Santa Cruz and has been operating since 1986. The Carmel office is at 26555 Carmel Rancho Blvd., and has been open since September 1991. A loan officer is available 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week.

Richard Kostkas has been the branch manager since the opening.

"I came to Pacific Inland because I was attracted to the company's innovative approach to the business of funding home loans. The Pacific Inland approach is based on a firm belief that service, program selection and extremely competitive pricing are a winning combination," Kostkas says.

RICHARD S. KOSTKAS

"Our job starts with helping the borrower figure out what type of loan program will best fit his needs. We then analyze the borrower's qualifying statistics and match them with the best possible loan program," he adds.

The current low interest rates make this a perfect time to refinance or purchase a home loan.

As an incentive to home buyers, Pacific Inland is offering a Priority Purchase Program which includes one-day credit approval, three-day appraisal and complete approval in seven working days. Just call 625-2244, or Salinas residents can call 753-2244.

BOB DENNIS, PACIFIC WESTERN BANK

Mysteries of SBA loans solved by lending team at Pacific Western Bank

PACIFIC WESTERN Bank can dispel any myths you have regarding SBA loans. For one thing, they are not just for small or troubled companies.

"We do a lot of loans in the $1 million range for established, successful companies," asserts Bob Dennis, assistant vice president for SBA lending.

In 1992 the bank funded more than $16 million worth of SBA loans. These ranged from $50,000 to $1.5 million. Pacific Western Bank maintains a very active SBA program, with five people working full-time in that department. It operates branches in Santa Cruz, Santa Clara and Monterey counties.

Dennis is the front-line when it comes to contacting Pacific Western Bank for an SBA loan.

"My job is to go out and meet with the customers. I gather preliminary business and personal financial statements. I review this information to make sure people financially qualify. Then I review it to see if they meet the SBA guidelines. If they do, we have underwriters who do the write-ups and process the loans."

Surprisingly, Dennis adds, "Almost all businesses meet the description of what SBA would call a small business."

The SBA program offers many advantages to businesses.

"Banks will use looser standards when it comes to granting a SBA loan. And the terms are usually better than a standard bank loan. SBA may offer seven to 10 years to pay off the loan, rather than five."

Whereas most banks have clamped down on real estate loans, those with SBA programs are thriving.

"One of the areas we've been successful in is SBA loans for the purchase of commercial real estate. As long as the business owner is going to occupy the majority of the building, SBA can offer a 25-year, fully amortized loan with no balloon payment or prepayment penalties. That program has really filled a niche within our community," Dennis explains.

Pacific Western Bank stands ready to serve not only existing businesses, but also start-up companies.

Locally, Pacific Western Bank has branches in Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey.

The telephone number is 655-1700.

In Carmel, branches are at 200 Clocktower Place, (ask for extension 4021) and at Dolores between Seventh and Eighth, downtown (ask for extension 4020).

To reach Bob Dennis, ask for extension 4258.

Axiom Office Interiors carries economy and deluxe lines

AXIOM OFFICE Interiors, in its sixth year at 531 Ramona Ave., Monterey, is a store that battles the "fall-apart factor" buyers experience when shopping at many discount office outlets.

"Even with our low-end furniture, everything is well-scrutinized before we sell it," notes Alan Vajdos, owner. "We won't carry anything that isn't good furniture. The customer gets a fair shake."

The customer also receives a lot of personal service when purchasing furniture at Axiom Office Interiors. Also, as compared to the so-called discount outlets, this local business offers space planning and design services, installation, leasing and rental. Featured are items in the budget category all the way up to high-end lines.

In the latter category is Knoll Studio, a very upscale residential and commercial furniture collection. The designs, by internationally acclaimed architects, resemble artwork in themselves. Chairs are priced in the $4,000 to $5,000 range, for example, and like fine automobiles, hold or increase their value with time.

Axiom Office Interiors can operate within any budget parameters, even helping you put together a reasonably priced but highly suitable home office.

Call them for no obligation, free counseling. The number is 649-0146. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

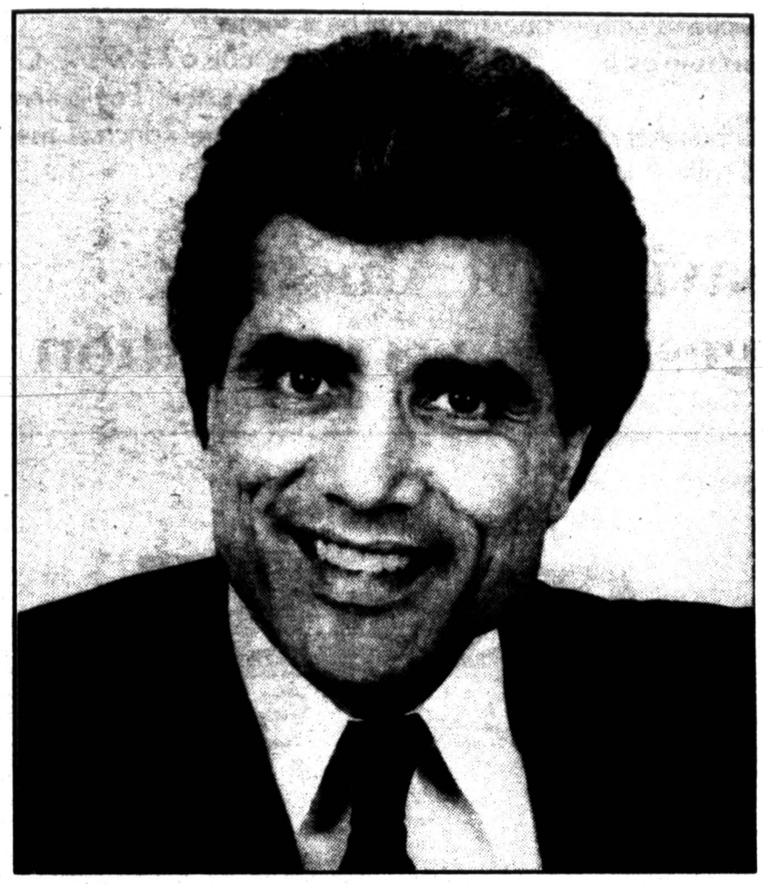
The Merritt Group oversees private investments

STRONG MANAGEMENT is the number one quality scrutinized by The Merritt Group when reviewing a company for investment potential.

Headquartered in Mission Viejo, The Merritt Group is a private investment, venture capital group.



LARRY CANOVA, THE MERRITT GROUP

According to Larry Canova, partner and chief executive officer, "At this particular time we are interested in asset purchasing." The Merritt Group seeks to reach "those individuals who would like to sell their businesses or their assets and perhaps retire or remove something from their books that they're not interested in anymore, and have the capital to invest in other projects."

He describes the company as attuned to the economic climate. Thus, it is very flexible.

"Our investments depend on the economic trends," Canova says. "Our portfolio would include mainly real estate acquisitions. We are also interested in equity joint venture investments, some debt financing and some entertainment investments."

The Merritt Group scouts start-up entrepreneurial types of projects, using management strength as its leading criterion.

"We like very much to see very strong management as well as growth potential when considering a business proposal. We consider each proposal independently, so each one is not viewed the same as another."

The CEO further explains that the Merritt Group maintains a strong network in the venture capital area, and is comfortable making helpful recommendations to entrepreneurs. "It's not a loss for us to do so, and can be a benefit to them," he asserts.

"We welcome business proposals from brokers as well as intermediaries," Canova says.

Contact the Merritt Group at 28081 Marguerite Parkway, No. 3548; Mission Viejo, CA 92690. Or telephone (714) 647-6618.

Western Equipment Leasing frees cash to let your business grow

FINANCIAL FLEXIBILITY stands at the cornerstone of every successful business. Officials at Western Equipment Leasing Co., by offering creative leasing plans, are able to assist businesses in attaining increased liquidity.

As explained by Kolby Keel, president, "With the economy the way it is right now, why spend your own money? Equipment leasing is a way to upgrade your company and deduct it off your taxes."

Based in Carmel Valley, Western Equipment Leasing prides itself in providing businesses with a way to sidestep those costly equipment purchases that can often lead to decreased cash flow.

"We're experts in arranging lease financing for all types of clients and businesses," says Keel, adding that his clients include doctors, lawyers, restaurants owners, even farmers.

"We lease anything from small telephone systems and fax machines to office automation systems and corporate jets."

"I concentrate primarily on the peninsula," says Keel, who has more than 20 years of experience in a wide variety of equipment financing. "I take personal interest in the peninsula, because it's where I live."

The company stands at the forefront of an industry that has blossomed in recent years, particularly during challenging economic times like these.

According to Forbes Magazine, leasing equipment just makes plain sense because of the "range of benefits that equipment leasing offers businesses." In fact, the U.S. Department of Commerce forecasts a 16 percent increase in equipment leasing this year.

In other words, why tie up your money in equipment when you can use it for other areas of growth?

Says Forbes, "Even if you have a healthy company generating good profits, you may want to preserve your cash for certain needs ... equipment leasing gives you maximum capital conservation."

In addition to saving money, leasing allows companies increased flexibility by providing a hedge against equipment obsolescence.

Western Equipment Leasing Co. is well aware of rapid changes taking place in the high-tech industry and provides clients with special lease programs to ensure the latest in office equipment innovations.

In addition, despite the Tax Reform Act of 1986, equipment leasing still offers tax benefits.

Keel points out that Western Equipment Leasing Co. works closely with clients in creating the ideal payment arrangements.

"Leasing programs and procedures are specially designed to take the red tape out of financing capital equipment for businesses," he says, adding that leasing is much simpler than traditional bank loans.

For more information, call 624-5757. Or stop by the offices of Western Equipment Leasing Co. at 26366 Carmel Rancho Lane, Suite D.

KOLBY KEEL serves as president of the Carmel Valley-based Western Equipment Leasing Co., which boasts an international clientele.

WHEN IT'S time to take a refreshment break at the water cooler, enjoy natural spring water derived from a private protected spring in Santa Cruz. Crystal Springs Water Co. has been serving Monterey and Santa Cruz counties for more than 50 years.

"Our reputation is for top-notch customer service," says Kent Hill, general manager. "We have route trucks in the area daily, serving as far south as Carmel Highlands, and throughout Carmel Valley, Monterey and Pacific Grove."

Crystal Springs provides for both residential and commercial customers with a complete line of water coolers, water dispensers, office coffee service, refrigerators and microwave ovens. The Waterguard System provides a more sanitary seal between bottle and cooler, and makes changing the bottle much easier.

Don Bowen addresses 'The mislaid power of the business community'

By DON BOWEN
President
Carmel Business Sales, Inc.

ABOUT TWO years ago, then Mayor Jean Grace attended one of our Carmel Business Association Thursday morning general meetings at La Playa Hotel. During the questions from the floor part of the meeting, something prompted Jean to comment: "You people don't realize the power you have."

DON BOWEN

I've never forgotten that remark and I have thought a lot about it ever since. As a group we have had problems or a certain reluctance in realizing the power we do have in this community. Maybe we are just too busy with our businesses and families to think about it. But it's there ... and it's an incredible and powerful device if we choose to use it.

Internally, our Carmel Business Association has come a long way. I have been a member for some 10 years and our staff and board has never been as strong as it has over the past couple of years. We are very fortunate to have a strong voice in Toni Jepson representing our organization at every opportunity. She speaks out forcefully and articulately on every matter that might affect the business community... and I have even seen her defending individual business applicants. The lady is dynamite and we're blessed to have her on our side. But she is only one person and maybe that's my point: just look what she alone has done. She is just one voice but she has made a difference ... and a strong difference. City Hall is more aware of the business community than it ever has been thanks to Toni. But imagine the impact we could have if we really took the time and effort to get organized for our causes. Look what Toni has done ... and we have a membership of over 500! Look what one man like Al Eisner has done in stopping the entire city process!

What kind of impact would it have on the Planning Commission or Council if the next time Toni stood up to speak on behalf of an issue there would be 10 or even five business owners there to comment also? What kind of an impact would it have if there were two or three letters to the editor in the Pine Cone every week supporting our causes? What kind of impact would it have if we polled our members on issues and turned in the results to City Hall?

Jean Grace was right. We don't realize the power we have.
